FOREIGN WORDS AND PHRASES

Frequently Occurring in English Literature, Including Proverbs, Colloquial Expressions, Mottoes of States and Nations, Current War Expressions.

Note for Pronunciation of Latin Expressions.

There are in use two methods of pronouncing Latin: one, the so-called English method, follows in general the principles of English pronunciation; the other, the so-called Roman method, follows more or less closely the pronunciation of the ancient Romans themselves. The English pronunciation is still generally used for Latin scientific terms, for names, phrases, and quotations in English context. The proper accentuation and syllabification according to the Roman method is here indicated for all Latin words and phrases. Then the pronunciation of the word or phrase according to the English method follows in parentheses; as, di'ri-go (dĭr'ĭ-gō). A Latin grammar should be consulted for further details of the Roman pronunciation.

THE PRINCIPAL LANGUAGES OF THE HUMAN RACE.

There are said to be 3,424 spoken languages or dialects in the world. These are distributed as follows:

America.....1,624 Asia.....937 Europe.....587 Africa.....276

The English language is spoken by more than 150,000,000 of people.
The German " " " " " " 120,000,000 " "
The Russian " " " " " " 90,000,000 " "
The French " " " " " " 60,000,000 " "
The Spanish " " " " " " 55,000,000 " "
The Italian " " " " " " 40,000,000 " "
The Portuguese " " " " " " 30,000,000 " "

The English language contains approximately 600,000 words. Of this total nearly one-half consists of scientific terminology seldom met outside of text-books and of archaic, obsolescent or obsolete terms.

An examination of 100,000 words of the language shows them to comprise:

60,000 words of Teutonic origin.
30,000 words of Greek or Latin origin.
10,000 words derived from other (miscellaneous) foreign sources.

As regards the number of words in the principal other languages no estimate of any practical value has been made in recent years, but existing dictionaries show the following facts:

Used in Ceremonious Communications with Persons of Title or Official Position

Ambassador.—The title "Excellency" belongs specially to ambassadors and to United States ministers to a foreign court. Address letters "His Excellency" (with name or distinctive title following). Begin, "Sir," "My Lord," according as the ambassador possesses title or not. When personal reference is made, say "Your Excellency." An envoy extraordinary or chargé d'affaires, though inferior to an ambassador strictly so called, also, usually receives the title "Excellency;" and the wives of ambassadors are generally addressed similarly during their husbands' tenure of office and while residing abroad.

Archbishop.—Address: "The most Reverend A— B—, D.D." The wife of an archbishop has no special title.

Bishop.—Address: "The Right Rev. Bishop," or "The Rt. Rev. A— B—, D.D." A bishop's wife and family have no special title.

Cardinal.—The special title of a cardinal as such is "His Eminence." Begin: "Your Eminence."

Congress, Members of (U. S.).—Addressed generally "The Honorable A— B—."

Consul.—There is no special form of address to a person as such, though in this country a consul is called "Honorable."

Doctor.—The initials denoting the particular degree are placed after the usual form of address, whether D.D., LL.D., M.D., D.Sc., etc., "The Rev. A.—, B.—, D.D.," "A—B, Esq., M.D." Less formally: "The Rev. Doctor B—," "Doctor A— B."

Duke.—Address: "His Grace the Duke of—." Begin: "My Lord Duke;" refer to as "Your Grace." All the children of a duke are entitled to be called "Right Honorable."

Governor of State (U. S.).—Usually addressed as "His Excellency." "His Excellency A— B—, Governor of —," or, "His Excellency the Governor of—." A lieutenant-governor is called "Honorable."

Judge.—"His Honor, Judge —" (surname); on the bench referred to as "Your Honor."

King.—Should be addressed as "The King's Most Excellent Majesty." Begin: "Sire," or "May it please Your Majesty;" refer to as "Your Majesty."

Lawyers.—Address: "Esquire," or "Mr. A— B—, Esq." This is a complimentary title given to all holding temporary civil offices, as magistrates, councilmen, etc.

Married Lady.—Has the title Mrs. prefixed to her name in speaking and writing. On being approached in writing or speech by strangers or inferiors, should be addressed as "Madam," or "Dear Madam." An unmarried lady is addressed as "Miss," in speaking or writing. Two or more unmarried ladies are addressed as "The Misses A— B—," while "Mesdames" is plural for "Madam."

Mayor.—Address: "The Honorable Mayor of —." Address: "Sir," or "Dear Sir." Mayors are usually styled "Honorable;" "The Honorable A— B, Mayor of —.

Member of House of Representatives.—Address: "Honorable A— B—, M.C." Begin: "Sir," or "Dear Sir." A Congressman's wife and family have no title of recognition.

Member of Parliament.—Not specially recognized except by adding "M.P." to ordinary address: "A— B—, Esq., M.P.;" "Sir A—B—, Bart., M.P."

Officers, Military and Naval.—Their professional rank is put before any title they may independently possess: "General" or

"Admiral, the Right Hon. the Earl of—;" "Colonel A— B—."

President (U. S.).—Address: "His Excellency the President of the United States," "His Excellency A— B—, President of the United States." The Vice-President and ex-presidents are "Honorable;" "The Honorable the Vice-President;" "The Honorable A— B."

Prince.—Address: "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales;" "His Royal Highness Prince A—" (Christian name). Begin in any case: "Sir;" refer to as "Your Royal Highness."

Princess.—Address: "Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales;" "Her Royal Highness the Princess A—" (Christian name); Begin: "Madam;" refer to as "Your Royal Highness."

Professor.—A form of address for a scholar who has achieved distinction in some special department of science or learning; but should not be employed indiscriminately to any teacher or schoolmaster.

Queen.—Address: "The Queen's Most Excellent Majesty." Begin "Madam," or "May it please Your Majesty;" refer to as "Your Majesty."

LETTER FORMS, BUSINESS AND SOCIAL.

CORRECT ENGLISH.

HINTS AND HELPS.

The ready use of good language is largely the result of practice in writing and of an abundance of good reading. In the choice of words, the paramount consideration should be exactness. That is, seek to say precisely what the thought requires, neither more nor less. This demands, of course, close scrutiny of meanings, and independence of current fashions in words. Seek to have at command more than one expression for the same thing. Not that several forms are in any case to be employed, but it often happens that if the writer has not thought broadly and deeply enough to have more than one expression for his idea, the one that he has will be meagre. Cultivate the habit of observing the derivation and history of words. A word whose etymology is known defines itself: the writer feels its force intuitively, and need not depend on a dictionary. Enlarge your vocabulary by diligent study of usage in the best writers. The true meaning of words is expressed only when they are interwoven with other words. No fineness of usage can be acquired from the dictionary alone. Do not use technical terms where they are not likely to be understood. Beware of fine writing. By fine writing is meant the use of pretentious terms for trivial ideas.

THE USES OF THE ARTICLES.

A or An, The.—The use of these forms is determined by sound and not by spelling. Before a consonant sound "a" is used; before a vowel sound "an" is used; "the" is used to point out some particular person or thing.

Examples.—A barn, an orchard, the house, etc.

THE USES OF ADJECTIVES.

An adjective describes or limits the noun or pronoun to which it is joined.

Adjectives are usually placed before the noun or pronoun they qualify.

The ascending comparison of adjectives is formed by adding er and est or more and most to the positive form, and the descending comparison by adding less and least

The comparative degree is used in comparing two objects; the superlative when more than two are compared.

Some adjectives can not be compared, and no adjective will admit of a double comparison.

This and that are singular, these and those are plural.

Two negative forms are not permissible.

THE USES OF THE ADVERB.

An adverb limits or emphasizes a verb, an adjective or another adverb.

Adverbs soon, often, early, late, etc., are compared regularly by adding er, st, est; those ending in ly are compared by prefixing more and most. The following are compared irregularly:

Positive.	Comparative.	Superlative.
Well	Better	Best
Badly	Worse	Worst
Far	Further / Farther	Furthest / Farthest
Little	Less	Least
Much	More	Most

Some adverbs do not admit of a comparison; as dead, square, etc

Adverbs should be placed as near the word or words they modify as possible. Observe the different uses of the word only in the following sentences: "Only John dropped his cane;" "John only dropped his cane;" "John dropped his cane only;" "John dropped only his cane;" "John dropped his only cane."

An adverb should never be placed between to and the infinitive.

Good, Well.—Good is always an adjective; well may be an adjective, but usually it is an adverb; as, "I slept well," "Father looks well."

Most, Almost.—Do not use most for almost. Say, "He passes here almost every day," not "most every day."

Latest, Last.—Do not say last for latest. Latest has reference to time, but last is a contraction of latest, and has not reference to time, but has reference to that which comes in a series.

Here and There.—Never use here and there after the adverbs this and that, as "This here boy," etc., "That there boy," etc.

Always, Continually.—Do not confuse these two words.

Always refers to what we do at all times. We do continually what we do without intermission.

Further, Farther.—Further is comparative and means more, as, "Nothing further was said." Farther has reference to distance, as, "He can go farther."

APPROPRIATE PREPOSITIONS.

Good usage requires proper prepositions to express one's meaning well.

At, In, Into.—Usually in implies inclosure, as presence inside of; into implies movement to the inside of. One cannot live in a house until he has moved into it. At implies nearness to the border or to small places or foreign cities.

Beside, Besides.—Beside means "at the side of;" as "The house beside the sea." Besides means "in addition to;" as, "Besides his farms he has some personal property."

Among, Between.—Among should be used when more than two are referred to; between when reference is made to two only.

Wait on, Wait for.—Wait on means attend to; wait for means to tarry, to wait.

CORRELATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

The correlative conjunctions are as follows:

neither.....nor

THE USES OF PRONOUNS.

The Possessive of Pronouns.—In forming the possessive the letter s only is added to the singular.

Examples.—Yours, hers, theirs. The possessive of who and which is whose. The relatives that and those have no possessive forms.

Singular and Plural Pronouns.—The pronoun should be in the same number as its antecedent.

The relative who is used to refer to persons; which, to inferior animals and things without life: what is used to refer to things, and that to both persons and things. Euphony, as a rule, determines between the uses of who, which and that.

Either refers to "one of the two;" when more than two are referred to, "any one" should be used. Neither refers to "no one of the two;" but when more than two are referred to, "no one" should be used. Each refers to numbers separately; all refers to numbers collectively.

THE USES OF NOUNS.

The Possessive Case.—The possessive of nouns in the singular number is formed by adding an apostrophe and the letter s.

Example.—"The girl's bonnet."

Sometimes the possessive is formed by adding the apostrophe only. This is done where the added s makes an unpleasant sound. However, this is a matter of taste.

Examples.—"For goodness' sake;" "John's hat;" "Dickens' Tale of Two Cities."

When the plural of a noun in the nominative case ends in s the possessive is formed by adding the apostrophe (') only, but if the plural does not end in s then the apostrophe (') and an s are added.

Example.—"Men's and boys' hats are for sale."

The possessive of compound nouns is formed by adding the sign of the possessive to the end of the compound.

Example.—"I drove my brother-in-law's horse."

Singular and Plural Number.—The plural of nouns is usually formed by adding s to the singular, but if the sound of s makes an additional syllable then es is added to form the plural.

Examples.—Hand, hands; church, churches.

Nouns ending in o preceded by a vowel form the plural by adding s only to the singular, but when the final o is preceded by a consonant the plural is formed by adding es to the singular

Nouns ending in y form their plurals by adding s to the singular, but if the final y is preceded by a consonant y is changed to i and es is added to form the pural.

Examples.—Money, moneys; lady, ladies.

In forming the plural of compound nouns the sign of the plural is added to the descriptive part of the phase.

Examples.—Aide-de-camp, aides-de-camp.

THE USES OF VERBS.

Verbs and Numbers.—Plural verbs require plural subjects; as, we were, not we was; you were, not you was; they are, not they is; they were, not they was: they have, not they has; they write, not they writes: the men are, not is: the children were, not was; the boys have, not has; my sisters write, not writes they are the boys who were at school. Jennie and Annie were schoolmates.

The Uses of the Auxiliary Verbs.—Shall, Will.—Will expresses the will or pleasure of its own subject. Shall subordinates the will of its subject to that of the speaker. "We will go," means "we are willing to go." "We shall go," means "we have decided upon going." Never say, "Will I do so and so?" The literal meaning of such an expression would be, "Am I willing to do," etc Remember that will always expresses willingness rather than futurity when it has a personal significance.

Should, Would.—Should is the past tense of shall, and would, the past tense of will, and the same rules governing the former govern also the latter. "We should go to town if we were able." "His wife would attend if you should ask her."

Can, Could; May, Might.—Can and could express ability or possibility, while may and might express permission. These words are often confused.

To Do; to See.—These two verbs give considerable trouble. Their principal forms are, do, did, done, and see, saw, seen. The second forms, did and saw, should never follow is, are, was, were, have, has, or had. The third forms done and seen, should always follow one of these words expressed or understood; as, I did the work, or I have done the work, or the work is done. I saw the picture, or I have seen the picture, or the picture was seen.

Verbs in General.—The rules given for to do and to see apply alike to all verbs. Such expressions as have came, have sang, was drove, have broke, have began, have knew, is froze, have gave, knowed, has went, has give, has rang, have ran, were took, has stole, throwed, have mistook, etc., are gross errors and should be avoided Lie and Lay.—Remember that lie means rest and lay means an action affecting some object.

Examples.—"The watch lies on the piano." "I will lay the watch on the piano." "Mother laid your gloves away for you."

Sit and Set.—Sit means to be in position to rest, to repose. Set is an active, transitive verb and means "to put," "to place," "to plant," to place in a condition, a state, or a posture.

Examples.—"Come sit in the easy chair." "Set the table in the dining room."

Don't (Do Not) Doesn't (Does Not).—These words are often misused. When you are in doubt about their use, compare the full forms with the verb; as, He don't know. If the full form be used, the absurdity is quickly seen; as, He do not know. The correct form should be, He does not know.

Had Rather, Had Better, Had Ought.—These are incorrect forms for would rather, might better, and ought.

Bring, Fetch.—Bring implies motion toward the speaker, not away. Fetch implies motion, first from the speaker, then toward him.

Note the following verb forms:

RULES FOR PUNCTUATION

Punctuation consists in the proper placing of points and marks in written or printed language to represent correctly the meaning and proper pauses in a sentence. The punctuation marks are the Comma (,), Semicolon (;), Colon (:), Period (.), Interrogation (?), Exclamation point (!), Hyphen (-), Dash (—), Apostrophe ('), Quotation Marks (" "), Parentheses ( ), Brackets [ ], and Braces { }.

THE COMMA (,).

The Comma is used to indicate the smallest logical or grammatical divisions of a sentence. It is employed after a long nominative clause; to set off parenthetic phrases; to introduce explanatory clauses; to set off a dependent clause; to separate repeated words; to introduce a brief quotation; to separate numerals into groups of three figures, and in various other cases where distinctness of meaning seems to require a brief pause. It was formerly often used profusely and indiscriminately, but the tendency now is to be sparing in its use.

THE SEMICOLON (;).

The Semicolon applies to greater breaks in the sense than could be properly set off by a comma and less than those calling for a colon or period. It is used to separate clauses of partially complete sense, and expressions having a common dependence upon each other; to mark off the larger divisions of a sentence wherein the smaller contain commas; to indicate collections of related words or expressions in pairs; to precede in a sentence the words "namely," "for example," and like phrases used to call attention to a citation.

THE COLON (:).

The Colon is a division of the sentence employed when the connection appears not close enough for the semicolon and too close for the period; as when the sense of several clauses culminates in a closing remark to follow the last of them; also, to introduce formal words; to set off principal and subordinate matters, as in a book title and its subdivision; to follow the more formal salutation of a letter or address; to introduce an extended quotation.

THE PERIOD (.).

The Period indicates a full stop in the sense, and is necessary at the end of every complete sentence, unless an interrogation or exclamation point is required. It is also used after abbreviations; as a decimal point; to indicate a more or less extended omission; after numerals to number paragraphs or other particulars.

THE INTERROGATION (?).

The Interrogation Point is the mark for any direct question, and is used to end a sentence containing a direct question, after a question within a declarative sentence, and after each question in a succession. It ends a sentence declarative in form but interrogative in purpose. An interrogation point inclosed in brackets indicates mistake or doubt, and is generally used ironically.

THE EXCLAMATION (!).

The Exclamation Point indicates surprise or a note of exclamation, and is used after words, phrases or sentences of interjection or exclamation, to denote impassioned address or surprise. This point can be doubled or trebled in repeated or successive exclamations for the sake of emphasis. It is often inserted after amusing, surprising or doubtful statements for special emphasis, and when inserted in brackets or placed outside of quotation marks it has an ironical meaning.

THE APOSTROPHE (').

The Apostrophe is the sign of the possessive case, and is used to indicate an elision, contraction or omission of letters from a word. Some unusual plurals not possessive require the apostrophe, and this mark may take the place of omitted figures or words in dates of a century.

QUOTATION MARKS (" ").

A Quotation usually requires quotation marks, unless the author's name or work is appended, or if the matter quoted has been introduced in a separate paragraph or paragraphs and in different type than the rest. Names of books and literary, musical and art titles in general, are quoted unless they have become so thoroughly familiar as to become household words, as the Bible, the Iliad. The names of newspapers and other periodicals are usually not quoted but given in italics. Quotation marks are sometimes used in irony or for emphasis. A quotation within a quotation takes but single marks; any quotation within that resumes double marks and so on. Often, however, primary quotations are given with single marks.

THE HYPHEN (-).

The Hyphen is a mark of division, put between compound words that have not become by usage single words, and where words are necessarily divided at the end of a line. It indicates for some special purpose prefixes and suffixes, syllabication, derivation, pronunciation or spelling, and is occasionally used to indicate a series.

THE DASH (—).

The Dash indicates an abrupt break or hiatus in a sentence from interruption, explanation, emphasis, rhetorical repetition or omission of letters within the first and the last letters of a word.

PARENTHESES ( ).

Parentheses are marks placed at the beginning and end of an explanatory or qualifying clause thrown into a sentence or paragraph with which it is not grammatically connected. In modern usage, however, the parentheses are usually replaced by dashes.

BRACKETS [ ].

Brackets are used similarly to parentheses, but are restricted to interpolations, corrections, notes or explanations.

BRACES { }.

CAPITALS.

Capitals are used to begin the first word of a sentence or a line of poetry; to begin direct questions or direct quotations within a sentence; to begin a resolution or an enactment; to begin all proper nouns, names of persons and places, and nouns referring to certain distinctive locations, as North, South, East and West; to begin the names of God and those pronouns or nouns that refer directly to deity; to begin all adjectives derived from the names of countries or places; to begin the names of the months and days of the week; to begin the titles of books and all important words in such title; to begin all formal or informal addresses, as "Dear Sir," etc.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INTRODUCTION.

The ability to write a neat, legible letter, correct in form and in English, spelling and punctuation, is one of the most valuable achievements a young business man or woman can possess. It is the lack of this ability that causes the failure of more stenographers and clerks than any other one thing. Business men very seldom complain that their stenographers lack speed but there is very bitter complaint that stenographers and clerks are not able to write a perfect letter themselves or correct any error made by the employer.

The following suggestions cover the whole field of ordinary letter writing. Every sentence is short and directly to the point and should be studied with care, lest some fact be overlooked or forgotten.

LETTERS.

The primary idea of a letter is conversation at a distance. If this be kept in mind one can scarcely fail to write appropriately, if one can converse properly; for a letter may be familiar or reserved, jocular or dignified, according to the relations between the writer and the person addressed. Letters of friendship should be simple and natural. It is the little things, the incidents of every-day life, the home chat, which makes a friendship letter interesting. Letters of courtesy include invitations, acceptances, acknowledgments, letters of congratulation, of condolence, of introduction, and of recommendation. Letters of business include all correspondence relating to business matters. Public letters embrace communications to newspapers regarding public affairs. Frequently a writer publishes a letter addressed to some prominent person criticizing his opinions or actions, or putting to him a number of formal questions with the purpose of receiving a published reply. This is usually called an open letter.

THE HEADING.

The parts of a letter are: (1) Heading; (2) Address; (3) Salutation; (4) Body; (5) Complimentary Close; (6) Signature

The Heading should give the full address, i. e., your post-office, street or box number and the state. The date includes the month, day of the month and the year. The form 13 March, 1910, is becoming quite popular in business correspondence. The reason for its use is because it is the natural form of expression. We say the 13th of March, not March the thirteenth. Another reason is that the former is less liable to errors. The following forms are bad and should not be used even by the busiest man: 4-6-191–, or 3-7-'1–, or 6/8/1–. Sometimes the day is written before the month. In such a case it would be difficult to tell the exact date of either one of the above expressions. The contractions 6th, 7th, 2d are never used when the year follows, as April 6, 191–, not April 6th, 191–. Yours of 6th instant is allowable in the body of a letter

The name of the state should not be omitted when writing from a large city, as there are many cities of the same name. There are six Chicagos, thirteen Bostons, sixteen Denvers, etc.

Location.—The heading on letter paper occupies only one line, but on note paper two lines. There are occasions, however, when more than one or two lines are used, but the rule should be to use as few lines as possible. The heading should occupy about two-thirds of the width of the sheet.

Study the following models:

1. Media, Pa., 17 April, 191–.
2. Box 58, Chicago, Ill.,
   April 17, 191–.

3. Starners, Adams Co., Pa., 17 April, 191-.
4 University of Pennsylvania,
Philadelphia, Pa., April 17, 191-
5 c/o Brown, Robinson Company,
No. 415 Carroll Street.
Atlanta, Ga., 17 April, 191-

THE ADDRESS.

The address consists of the name, title, and post-office address of your correspondent, and usually occupies two lines; sometimes three are required. The name and title are written on the first line, below the last line of the heading, allowing a margin of one-tenth of the width of the paper at the left The address is written upon the next line below the name and title, allowing a margin of one-fifth the width of the paper. If a third line is used, the margin consists of one-fifteenth of the width of the paper, so that the three lines form a perfect slant of about twenty degrees.

When writing to friends the address may consist of the name only, and with very intimate friends it may be omitted in the superscription of the letter, but, in either case, the address must be given at the end of the letter. The author always gives the address in the superscription, when writing a business letter, and at the end when writing a social letter. The address in the letter should be as full and clear as the address upon the envelope.

Titles.—It is a lack of respect not to add some title to the name of your correspondent. Courtesy demands it. Titles may be classed as follows: Social titles; scholastic titles and official titles.

Mister, abbreviated Mr. may be applied to all classes of men, titled or untitled. It always precedes the name, and has many applications, as, Mr. Smith, Mr. Senator, Mr. Chairman, Mr. President, the Rev. Mr. Rogers, etc.

Esquire is abbreviated Esq., and is usually affixed to the name. It applies to men in the legal profession. Mr. and Esq. are never used together.

Messieurs, abbreviated Messrs. is always used to supply the plural of Mr. and precedes the firm name, as Messrs. Fink & Fink or Messrs. Group & Co. The title Messrs. is sometimes omitted when the firm name is very long.

Mistress abbreviated Mrs. The title precedes the name of a married woman, and if her husband is living, the title Mrs. is prefixed to the name of her husband, as Mrs. Robert S. Williams. But if her husband is dead, then Mrs. is prefixed to her Christian name, as Mrs. Mary Hutchinson.

Mesdames abbreviated Mmes. This title is used when addressing more than one married woman. The title is also used with the name of a firm composed of married or unmarried women.

Master.—Not abbreviated, and is prefixed to the name of a boy.

Miss.—This is not an abbreviation It is used as a prefix to the name of an unmarried woman, as Miss Jessie Wood. The plural of Miss is Misses, and is used when more than one person is referred to in the same person or class.

Doctor of Medicine.—Abbreviated Dr. or M. D. The former precedes the name, and the latter follows it, but they are never used at the same time. The correct forms are as follows: Dr. Edward M. Foose or Edward M. Foose, M. D.

Reverend abbreviated Rev. and belongs to the Clergy, as Rev. Upton A. Hankey. When Rev. is used with the official or professional titles The is prefixed; as, The Rev. Prof. Snyder, The Rev. Father Donahue. Rev. is never used immediately before the surname, as Rev. Cross. When no other title can be used, then the Christian name must be used or some other title given, as Rev. Wharton A. Kline or Rev. Mr. Kline.

Professor abbreviated Prof. and is prefixed to the name of any person who is regularly elected to a chair in some incorporated educational institution conferring degrees under seal. One may be given the honorary title when he has become noted for some special line of learning.

Scholastic Degrees and Official Titles are always abbreviated when used in addresses

Titles of High Rank such as President, Governor, etc., are never abbreviated

Two Titles may be used with the same name when one does not include the other

SALUTATION.

The salutation expresses the respect we pay to our correspondent. It should occupy the next line below the address. When a two line address is used, the salutation may begin as in these examples:

Messrs. Jordan, Williams & Co.,
Cleveland, Ohio.
Dear Sirs:—I enclose, etc.

Mr. J. G. Henry,
Carlisle, Pa.
Dear Sir:—Your favor of 10th, etc.

If the address occupies three lines then the salutation should always begin as in these examples:

Messrs. James B. Jerome Company,
714 N. Broad Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Dear Sirs:—In reply to your, etc.

Mr. William W. Beckner,
429 Market Street,
San Francisco, Cal.
Dear Sir:—Enclosed you will find, etc.

If only the name is used in the address then the salutation should always begin as in this example:

Mrs. Henry D. Spangler,
Dear Madam:
We extend to you, etc.

If no address is used, then the salutation should begin thus:

My dear Jessie:

The salutation should never be abbreviated. In the use of business salutations Sir and Madam are the most formal: Dear Sir and Dear Madam are less formal and are the most prevalent forms. The more familiar forms are My dear Sir and My dear Madam.

When addressing strangers, use Sir or Madam or Dear Sir or Dear Madam. Although the latter implies some degree of acquaintance, yet the present day etiquette regards it good to use these salutations when addressing strangers. The proper form for a single lady, of whatever age, is Dear Madam in case of a stranger, or Dear Miss Smith in case of an acquaintance.

When addressing an acquaintance use Dear Sir, My dear Sir, Dear Miss Magill, Dear Madam.

When addressing friends, My dear Sir, My dear Gaylord, My dear Friend, My dear Miss James, etc.

When addressing relatives, My dear Brother, My dear Son, etc.

BODY.

The body of a letter is a conversation in writing and one's style should be perfectly natural, i. e., he should write as he would talk. The first and indispensable quality of a good style is clearness. Generally it is enough if the writer devote his efforts simply to being understood. Plainness and clearness are the foundations upon which all other qualities are built. Too exclusive endeavor after precision may make the style stiff and angular. It is always unwise to impair the thought for the sake of the expression. To the quality of clearness must be added the quality of force. In a letter the spirit of the writer should show itself. The strongest thoughts find brief expression. As a rule the language which simply suggests the thought is more interesting than that which gives it full expression.

Penmanship and spelling are two features of a conversation in writing which must receive our careful attention. A misspelled word or an illegible hand are not excusable. Some persons think it is a mark of genius to write so no one can read it, but there are other ways of showing one's genius decidedly more commendable.

The beginning.—When the address consists of two lines and the salutation occupies the third margin space, the body of the letter should begin on the same line with the salutation, as:

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 16, 19 –.

Mr. James M. Group,
Gettysburg, Pa.
Dear Sir:—Your favor of the 14th, etc.

When the address consists of three lines, and the salutation begins at the first marginal space, the body should begin on the same line, as:

Boston, Mass., Jan. 16, 19 –.

Mr. Court F. Wood,
No. 11, East Capitol St.,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Sir:—Your favor of recent date, etc.

Good authorities sometimes drop down on the first line below the salutation when the address consists of but two lines, but this is never allowable when the address consists of more than two lines.

Paragraphs and Margins.—Great care should be taken in paragraphing a letter. Make a new paragraph at every change of subject, or the introduction of a new phase of the same subject.

Paging.—When a letter consists of more than one sheet of single sheet paper, the initials and the number should be written in the upper left-hand corner of each sheet.

Figures.—Amounts of merchandise, as 5 bushels of onions, and dates, as March 2, 191–, are always written in figures. Generally, if numbers contain more than two figures they should be written in figures, but numbers containing one or two figures should be spelled out.

Never abbreviate anything in the body of a letter.

Never write on both sides of the sheet in business correspondence.

In business correspondence always refer to previous correspondence by date or otherwise.

Be prompt in answering letters.

Study how to assort your mail, i. e., how to know what letters need answers and what letters need the waste basket.

Many persons begin to write letters without the least conception of what they want to say. They rattle off something that is about as meaningless as chaff, and will fall short of having the effect intended. Study your correspondent, his character, his habits, his letter, then outline your thought mentally, before attempting to write to him. If business men would make it a rule to put a little more thought into their correspondence they would be surprised to find the wonderful effect it would have upon their business.

Letters should be posted in each departing mail. No firm whose business has reached any magnitude can afford to be negligent in the matter of posting their mail. Often a few minutes will prevent much vexation and trouble.

COMPLIMENTARY CLOSE.

The complimentary close consists of the term of courtesy we use in closing our letter, together with the signature.

The complimentary close should begin on the first line below the body of the letter and at the center of the paper.

In business, Yours truly, Yours very truly, Yours respectfully or Respectfully, Sincerely yours, are some of the most common forms of complimentary closing. Never close a letter with "Yours, etc."

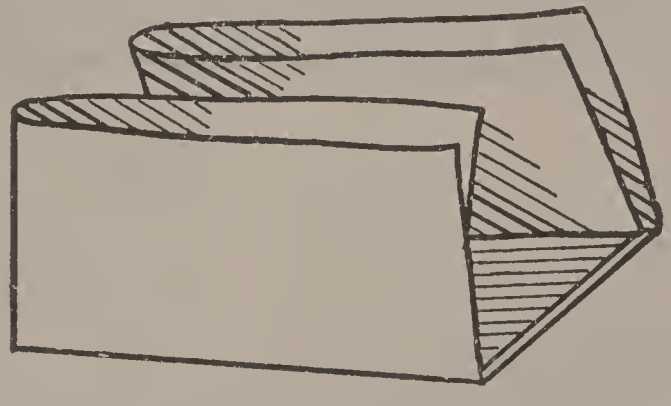
In social correspondence the form of the complimentary close must be determined by the relations existing between the parties.

The complimentary close should not be less formal or more formal than the salutation. Your "good-byes" should always have some consistency with your "how-do-you dos," i. e., if you said "My dear friend," you would not close with "Your friend," That would be a repetition. Nor would you use Respectfully, because that would seem too formal, and would be inconsistent. The complimentary close must be consistent with the salutation used.

Never use "I remain" or "We remain," unless you have had previous correspondence with the person written to.

THE SIGNATURE.

The signature should be written under the complimentary close and should begin at such a point that a margin of about half an inch will be left at the right of the sheet. It should be written plainly, and always in full, i. e., do not sign your name "Tom," "Jack," "E. M. B." or "Your sister." Such letters, if lost, always go the the Dead Letter Office and are destroyed.



Do not write your name at one time, J. W. Smith, then at another time J. William Smith, then John W. Smith, then John William Smith. Have only one way of writing your name.

If you are a woman and do not use your husband's first name, or if you are not married, you should always indicate your relation by using Miss or Mrs. either with or without the parenthesis, as (Miss) Gertrude Kram or (Mrs.) Elizabeth Bailor.

When a secretary signs the letters for his proprietor he should always sign his initials under the signature. Usually the initials are preceded by the prefix per.

FOLDING.

A letter-sheet should be folded from the bottom forward, bringing the lower edge near the top, so as to make the half length a little shorter than the envelope, and then break the fold. Next fold twice the other way. beginning at the left edge, folding towards the right. Measure these folds also, so as to fit the envelope. A note-sheet should be folded twice, from the bottom forward When the envelope is nearly square, a single fold of the note-sheet is sufficient. If you want to make a good letter look slovenly, endeavor, by folding down a half inch at each end, to make it fit an envelope an inch too short.

SUPERSCRIPTION.

The Envelope Address.—Thirty thousand misdirected letters reach the Dead Letter Office at Washington daily. The public need to be educated along this line. In addressing an envelope, write first the name, then the postoffice, then the State. If additional matter, such as street, or box, or county, is necessary, put it at the lower left-hand corner. Even in the case of large cities, it is necessary to write the name of the State, for there are in the United States, five New Yorks, nine Philadelphias, and twelve Bostons.

Be particularly careful in writing the abbreviations of States. Thus, N. Y. may easily be taken for N. J.; Pa. for Va.; Cal. for Col.; Md. for Ind.; Me. for Mo. Mail intended for people who will be in a place only a day or two should have "transient" written in the upper left-hand corner and enclosed in brackets.

Letters to be registered must have the name and address of the sender on the envelope. Do not write the name of the county where the postal employees always look for the name of the post office. Railway mail clerks have to distribute many pieces of mail while the train is running from one station to another, and must decide to what place to send a letter in a fraction of a second. When the county and post office are close together, the clerk is almost as apt to take the name of the county for the post office as the right name. The penmanship should be distinct and legible, and the address neat and elegant, without ornamentation. Non-delivered letters are returned to the writers who have their names and post offices printed on the upper left-hand corner. A little more care in the matter of addressing envelopes would save much labor, and the government much expense.

Postage.—Every letter should have one full rate postage prepaid, otherwise "postage due" is marked upon it, and collected from your correspondent. The stamp should always be placed in the upper right-hand corner of the envelope, leaving a margin of about one-eighth of an inch at the right side and top. Do not put the stamp on any other part of the envelope, as it gives the postal clerks a great deal of trouble and considerable loss of time in stopping to turn the letter to cancel it.

Materials.—Use the best stationery you can afford, and see that your letter paper and envelope correspond in quality and color. The size of the letter sheet ordinarily used in business, is either what is termed note size, about 5 by 8 inches, or letter size, 8½ by 11 inches. Use the best of ink and pens.

Letters Ordering Goods.—Such letters should be clear and to the point. They should state how the goods are to be sent, by what railroad, whether by express or by freight. The goods should be carefully described, so that no mistake will be made in filling the order. If only one or two articles are ordered they may be written in the body of the letter in the proper form. But if a number of articles are ordered, a separate sheet should be used and headed Order No.——giving the date and signed by the person ordering. If money is enclosed the amount should be written out in words, sometimes it is written in figures and enclosed in parenthesis. The kind of remittance should be mentioned and for what applied The remittance should be pinned to the letter.

LETTER FROM A YOUNG MAN STARTING IN BUSINESS.

Freeport, Ill., Sept. 17, 19 —.

Messrs. Marshall Field & Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs:—Having recently started in business for myself, by the purchase of the stock and fixtures of the late Chas. R. Small, with whom I was employed for many years, I desire to open an account with your house.

I enclose herewith statement of my resources, including inventory of my present stock. I am pleased to refer you to the First National Bank of this city, with whom I have an account, and to Mr. Wm. K. Field, one of our leading men, with whom I have enjoyed a long and intimate personal acquaintance. I find that I need some of your goods immediately, and am enclosing an order to cover pressing requirements. If you prefer to make some inquiries before opening a credit account, it will be entirely satisfactory to me, if you will ship these goods to your own order, sending bill of lading, and draft for amount of bill, less 5%, to the First National Bank, where it will be promptly paid.

Expecting your prompt attention to this small order, I am,

Respectfully yours,
Thomas S. Nelson.

REPLY FROM WHOLESALE HOUSE.

Chicago, Sept. 20, 19 —.

Mr. Thomas S. Nelson,
Freeport, Ill.

Dear Sir:—Replying to your favor of the 17th inst., we enclose invoice herewith for goods shipped as per your order, amounting to $746.38, subject to 5%-10 days, or 4%-30 days.

We have great pleasure in opening this account with you, and trust our business relations may prove pleasant as well as mutually profitable. Your statement and references are eminently satisfactory, besides which we have had most favorable reports concerning you from our Mr. Young, who we believe has done considerable business with you while you were with Mr. Small.

Wishing you abundant success in your business venture, and soliciting your further orders, we are

Very truly yours,
Marshall Field & Co.

CALLING ATTENTION TO AN ERROR IN A BILL.

Charlotte, N. C., June 10, 19—.

Messrs. H. B. Claflin & Co.
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:—Upon examining your bill for last shipment of goods, I find that you have charged me for four dozen pairs of silk gloves which I never ordered nor received. I enclose the bill herewith that the error may be corrected.

Yours very respectfully,
John R. Landis

REPLY TO PREVIOUS LETTER.

New York, June 12, 19—.

Mr. John R. Landis,
Charlotte, N. C.

Dear Sir:—We greatly regret that you were caused any annoyance by the carelessness of a clerk, who, having proved himself incompetent, has left our service. We enclose the correct bill to you, and offer apologies for the error.

Truly yours,
H. B. Claflin & Co.

ASKING A FRIEND TO MAKE SOME PURCHASES.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 17, 19—.

Dear Annie:—I am going to trespass on your kindness by asking you to make a few purchases for me. Enclosed find ten dollars and a memorandum of the things I want. My household duties and the care of the children very closely confine me to my home, and are my excuse for troubling you.

We are in our usual health, and I trust you and your family are well, and having a pleasant winter.

With kind regards to Mr. Evans, and love to you and the children I am,

Sincerely your friend,
Mary L. Cather.

Mrs. Wm. D. Evans,
1743 Jackson Boulevard,
Chicago, Ill.

DEMANDING PAYMENT FOR RENT.

Lexington, Ky., March 17, 19—.

Mr. D. P. Knowland,

Dear Sir:—I have waited patiently for your convenience in the matter of the payment of rent for the house you occupy. As, however, you have now been my tenant for four months without meeting any of the payments, which should be made monthly, I feel obliged to remind you of the fact that there is now $80.00 due me.

Trusting that you will give this your immediate attention, I am,

Yours truly,
Willard R. Brown.

SERIES OF COLLECTION LETTERS.

FIRST REQUEST.

Dear Mr. Benson:—In looking over the books this morning I noticed that your bill for goods delivered in April has not been paid. The matter is not worrying me at all, but I thought you might be glad to have it brought to your attention. If convenient, perhaps you will send us a draft before the close of the month.

Cordially yours,

SECOND REQUEST.

Dear Mr. Benson:—Your account is now considerably overdue and we have received no reply to our letter of June 1.

We inclose a statement of the account, which we shall be glad to have you compare with the statement on your own books. If it agrees, may we not receive your check by return mail?

Very truly yours,

THIRD REQUEST.

Dear Sir:—We have twice called your attention to your unpaid account, but have received no reply to our letters.

As our terms to all customers are thirty days, we cannot make a longer extension with you except by special agreement. May we expect your check by return mail?

Very truly yours,

FOURTH REQUEST.

Dear Sir:—You have not answered our requests for payment of your April account of $184.63.

As this account is long overdue, and as we have received no explanation of the delinquency, we feel that we can no longer carry it on our books. We will turn it over to our attorneys for collection unless it is paid before the 15th.

Very truly yours,

COLLECTING SMALL AMOUNTS.

Dear Sir:—Please advise us just WHAT YOU INTEND TO DO regarding your account. We have written you several times and feel that we are at least entitled to the COURTESY OF A REPLY.

We try to believe that there is some satisfactory reason why we have not heard from you; but if we do not receive an answer by return mail, we shall think otherwise, and it will be necessary for us to take up the matter from AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT STANDPOINT.

We hope, however, to hear from you at once, and in the meantime beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

Invoice inclosed.

ANOTHER SMALL-ACCOUNT LETTER.

Dear Sir:—You have paid no attention to the several statements that we have sent you, so we attach hereto a duplicate of the bill representing the small account that you owe us, in order that you may see exactly what it is for.

If there ever was any profit in this transaction, it has been almost dissipated by the expense of having been obliged to write you several times about it, and while the matter may be small, we feel that IT SHOULD HAVE ATTENTION.

You will find inclosed a self-addressed envelope that will add to the convenience of sending a remittance, which we hope to receive BY RETURN MAIL. Send stamps if more convenient to you.

Yours very truly,

ALTERNATIVE FOR PREVIOUS LETTER.

Dear Sir:—

"For want of a nail the shoe was lost,
For want of a shoe the horse was lost,
For want of a horse the rider was lost."

It is a habit with some people to regard as "trifles" small accounts, not realizing that credit accounts of this kind are greater accommodations to them than larger accounts, for the reason that there is little or no profit in them.

It is the custom for all business houses to have a routine by which statements are sent out at regular intervals, and therefore if any profit ever existed in a small account it is very quickly dissipated by the expense and postage attached to sending out statements. The loss to every business house in small accounts amounts to considerable in a year's time, for

"Large streams from little fountains flow,
Tall oaks from little acorns grow."

We hope that a remittance from you by return mail to cover the inclosed small account will show that this little preachment has not been lost. Kindly relieve your mind of the matter by attending to it right now. We inclose self-addressed envelope for convenience in replying. (Postage stamps acceptable.)

Yours very truly,

OPENING NEW ACCOUNTS

Dear Sir:—We thank you for the order you have placed with our representative, Mr. Blank.

According to our records, we have not had the pleasure of doing business with you before, but we shall aim to serve you so well that we can expect a continuance of your patronage.

As is customary with all business houses, we are obliged to seek information that will enable us to determine the line of credit to which a new customer is entitled. To facilitate these investigations, we should appreciate your giving us the names of a few houses with whom you have been dealing.

For your convenience in replying, we inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. May we hear from you by return mail?

Yours very truly,

Dear Sir:—We have your letter of June 8th, with order for ————. We shall be pleased to ship this order immediately upon receipt of the amount specified in the accompanying memorandum.

As you no doubt know, we are a large wholesale house, and do not open accounts with individuals for small amounts.

With this explanation, you will understand that our request for a remittance is not a reflection upon you personally, but merely the application of a rule which has been established by our Company.

We hope to receive your remittance by return mail, so that we can give early attention to your order.

Yours very truly,

Dear Sir:—We acknowledge your order of (date, or for—naming goods ordered) for which accept our thanks.

According to our Credit Department records, it seems that we have not had the pleasure of doing business with you before, and under the circumstances we are obliged to make the necessary investigations before opening a credit account. We are, however, unable to obtain sufficient information to warrant our shipping the goods that you have ordered. This is no reflection upon you, for the only avenue we could employ for obtaining information was through the reports of the commercial agencies. We should therefore be pleased to have you send us the names of houses with whom you have been dealing and other information that will enable us to base a line of credit.

As you no doubt are aware, it is customary with all business houses to obtain information of this kind before opening new accounts, and a full and frank statement is of as much benefit to the buyer as it is to the seller, and leads to mutually pleasant business relations.

We have your order ready to ship and hope that we may hear from you by return mail.

Yours very truly,

Dear Sir:—We thank you for the order you placed with our representative, Mr. Blank.

According to our Credit Department records, it seems that we have not had the pleasure of doing business with you before, and under the circumstances we are obliged to make the necessary investigations before opening a credit account. We are, however, unable to obtain sufficient information to warrant our shipping the goods that you have ordered.

Please understand, this is no reflection upon you, for the only avenue we could employ for obtaining information was through the reports of the commercial agencies. Unfortunately, we were unable to receive from this source information upon which we could base a line of credit.

Under the circumstances, we hope that you can arrange to send a remittance to cover the present order and we will allow you —% cash discount; and if you wish you can at the same time give us the names of houses with whom you have been dealing and other information that will enable us to base a line of credit.

We have your order ready to ship, and hope that we may hear from you with remittance by return mail.

Yours very truly,

CREDIT REFUSAL LETTERS.

We are extremely sorry that your financial condition does not warrant us in extending credit to you. If you can satisfy your present obligations, we shall be glad to reconsider your order.

2.

Our relations in the past have been so pleasant that we regret to refuse the extension of further credit. But you will naturally appreciate our position and the necessity of this refusal.

3.

We have your order of January 6th, but owing to an extraordinary rush of business we are obliged to refuse many orders. We therefore suggest that you avoid delay by placing yours elsewhere.

4.

We conclude from your letter of January 6th that you are not familiar with the policy of our house. Our terms are cash. We will therefore hold your order until we hear again from you.

5.

We have your letter of January 6th, and although we have all confidence in your credit, we make it a rule never to ship more goods until the previous shipment is paid for. Can you aid us by conforming with this custom?

APPLICATIONS FOR EMPLOYMENT.

FROM A YOUNG LADY APPLYING FOR A CLERKSHIP.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 18, 19—.

WANTED.—A YOUNG LADY CLERK IN A DRY goods store. Must be accustomed to the business. Address with reference B 80 News office.

Dear Sir:—I wish to apply for a position as per the enclosed advertisement. I have been for the past two years in the employ of Miller & Snodgrass, dry-goods dealers, 217 Camden Street, until their failure about two weeks ago. I beg to refer you, for testimonials, to Mr. Wm. P. Snodgrass, now with the firm of Thompson & Hood, 147 Canal St., should you desire to consider my application.

Yours respectfully,.
Louise A. Norcross,
284 N. Butler St.

APPLICATION FROM A REPRESENTATIVE.

New York, June 7, 19—.

A LOCAL REPRESENTATIVE wanted; no canvassing or soliciting required; good income assured. Address Co-operative Realty Co., 148 Mason Building, Washington, D. C.

Co-operative Realty Co.,
148 Mason Building,
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:

Do you want a representative who will always be "on the job," who has had five years' experience in live real estate work, and who can write letters that bring in cash? Then you want me.

I am a college man (A.B., Columbia, 1907) and after three years of successful selling for Strong and Rodgers, real estate brokers, became their head correspondent, handling a large publicity campaign for certain outlying districts. That I have made good the accompanying report will show.

May I know details of your proposition and what income may reasonably be expected? I inclose copies of letters of recommendation and shall be glad, if your offer is satisfactory, to come to Washington for an interview.

Very truly yours,
Howard B. Snyder.

Business Address: 1468 Broadway, New York City.
Home Address: 16 Ridge Street, East Orange, N. J.

FROM A BOY APPLYING FOR AN OFFICE POSITION.

WANTED—IN GRAIN COMMISSION HOUSE, a smart lad for office work; must be a good penman. Address in own handwriting, stating age and salary expected, W 32, Ledger Office.

4711 Windsor Ave., W. Philadelphia, Pa.
Nov. 14, 19 –.

W 32, Ledger Office, Philadelphia:

Dear Sir:—I am fifteen years old, and have finished the eighth grade in school. This is a sample of my penmanship. I am quick at figures and understand bookkeeping and office work, having assisted my father, Mr. T. Ruggles, in the coal business for the past year, when I was not in school. As he has just sold out I am compelled to look for another position. I refer you to Mr. Jas. H. Simpson, 4416 Baltimore Ave., who has known me for a long time, also to my pastor, Rev. Thos. S. Gray, 4952 Catherine St.

I would be willing to start at a salary of $5.00 a week, but would hope soon to be worth more than that.

Respectfully,
George M. Ruggles.

ANSWERING AN ADVERTISEMENT FOR A BOOKKEEPER.

1512 Naudain St., New Orleans, La., May 1, 19 –.

Mr. Edward Mullen,
New Orleans, La.

Dear Sir:—I have been in the employ of Mr. Horace Paist for six years, until he sold out his business a few weeks ago. I kept the books of his house during the past four years. He permits me to refer to him for any information which you may require.

Should my application meet your views, it will be my earnest endeavor to faithfully and punctually fulfill the duties required.

Yours very respectfully,
Charles E. Kaupp.

ANSWERING AN ADVERTISEMENT FOR A COOK.

456 Fifth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa., March 17, 19 –.

Mrs. S. F. Perkins:

Dear Madam:—Seeing an advertisement in this morning's "Press" for a plain and fancy cook, I wish to apply for the situation.

I have been with my present employer, Mrs. Joseph D. Rhoads, for three years, and only leave because she has rented her house for the summer, to make a visit among her relatives in New England.

I shall remain here until Tuesday next, unless I find a place sooner, and Mrs. Rhoads will give you any information you may desire regarding me.

Very respectfully,
Laura K. Easton.

APPLICATION FOR A SITUATION AS GARDENER.

348 W. Seventh St., New York, June 10, 19 –.

Dear Sir:—Understanding that you want a gardener, I beg to offer myself as an applicant for the place. I have had constant experience for ten years, both in nursery grounds and private gardens, and am thoroughly acquainted with the management of a greenhouse and a hothouse.

The enclosed testimonials, from gentlemen for whom I have worked will, I trust, prove satisfactory. My last employer, Mr. James Winter, White Plains, N. Y., will inform you concerning my fitness for the position.

I am a married man, thirty-seven years of age.

Respectfully,
John I. Snowden.

APPLICATION FROM A GOVERNESS.

(Adv. pasted in.)

Glenhaven Seminary, Belfast, Me., April 18, 19—.

Mrs. W. G. Ramsey,
Holyoke, Mass.

Dear Madam:—In answer to the above advertisement, I would say that I am seeking such a situation as you offer. My present term of teaching will close June 15th, at which time I would be ready to enter upon the work of superintending the education of your daughters.

I have, for several years, taught the higher English studies, besides French, Latin and drawing. For testimonials, I beg to refer you to the principal of my school—Mr. John Sailor.

Hoping that I may hear from you soon, and that we may make an arrangement mutually satisfactory, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,
Rebecca M. Patton.,

ASKING THE CHARACTER OF A GOVERNESS.

1213 Green St., Holyoke, Mass., April 20, 19—.

Mr. John Sailor,
Principal, Glenhaven Seminary.

My dear Sir:—I will esteem it a great favor if you will inform me concerning the ability of Miss Patton to give instruction in the higher English studies, French and drawing, she having referred me to you.

I am desirous of securing the services of a young lady whose moral influence will guard my children from danger—one whose amiability of character will make her a pleasant companion as well as a teacher. I am much pleased with the appearance of Miss Patton, and if your report is favorable, I shall probably engage her at once.

Yours very respectfully,
(Mrs.) Mary R. Ramsey.

LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION.

RECOMMENDING A SALESMAN.

Newton, Ga., March 10, 19 –

Mr. George I. Githens,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir—Your favor of the 4th inst., relative to the ability of Mr. Samuel Thomas is received. We take great pleasure in testifying to his high character and his business ability. He was in our employ for four years, as a salesman, during which time his affability and uniform courtesy to customers, coupled with his truthful representations in regard to goods, made him a universal favorite.

Accurate in accounts, a good penman, attentive and energetic, he is a most useful man in the office, and the firm securing his services may be congratulated on their good fortune. He left us of his own accord to take another position at larger salary.

Very truly yours,
Odgen & Co.

LETTERS OF SYMPATHY

ON THE DEATH OF A HUSBAND.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 10, 19 –.

Dear Friend:—I know that nothing can make amends for the great loss you have sustained. I deeply realize, from having passed through a similar bereavement, that mere words wholly fail to cheer the almost broken heart, yet I cannot but hope that the heartfelt sympathy of a sincere friend will not be deemed intrusion on your grief.

It has been well said that "We weep for the loved and lost because we know that our tears are in vain." I would ease your sorrow, and yet know not how. We can only acknowledge that the affliction is God's will. Over in the beautiful land we may not doubt your dear one is free from the pains that he so long endured here; and when we gather at the river, is it not a sweet consolation to think that he will meet you on the other side?

Commending you to Him who doeth all things well, I remain, in the tenderest friendship,

Your sincere friend,
Pauline Herron.

Mrs. Emma Martin.
Erie, Penna.

REPLY TO PREVIOUS LETTER.

Erie, Pa., Oct. 20, 19 –.

My dear Friend:—I can scarcely express to you how grateful I am for your letter, and the loss of my husband has so prostrated me that I am hardly able to write.

My friends assure me that time will reconcile me to my great bereavement. My trust in our Heavenly Father, and the great consolation that you speak of, which comes from the knowledge that we will meet our dear ones in a world where partings are no more, will, I believe, enable me to bear my sorrow. God bless you for your thought of me in the dark hours, and your sweet words of sympathy.

Your friend,
Emma Martin.

ON THE DEATH OF A MOTHER.

Pottstown, Pa., March 16, 19 –.

Friend Owen:—I have just learned, on my return from a visit in the South, of the death of your mother. Having suffered the loss of my own mother when a child, I know how to sympathize with you in your affliction. Fortunately for you, your mother lived to guide the footsteps of her boy till he had reached manhood's years. It can be truly said that, in the training of her family, in the church and the social circle, she always did her duty nobly. Ripened in years, and fully prepared for another state of existence, she passes on now to enjoy the reward of a life well spent on earth.

Truly yours,
Frank P. Hunter.

Owen Brown.

ON THE DEATH OF A WIFE.

Bristol, Pa., Nov. 10, 19 –.

My dear George—I know that this letter will find you filled with grief at the loss of your dear wife. You have, indeed, suffered a great affliction. A more faithful partner never lived, and few men, I venture to say, ever enjoyed more domestic tranquillity than yourself.

A true wife, and a devoted mother. No higher eulogy can be pronounced upon any woman. Truly the great central sun of your household has gone down, and I most truly, deeply sympathize with you in your affliction.

Let us hope, however, that, in the golden summer of another life, children, mother and father will gather again in a sweet reunion, where partings are unknown. The days seem dark and gloomy to you now, but sunshine will come to you, through your children and friends, and the future, I trust, has much of happiness in store for you.

I hope soon to have the opportunity of seeing you and your girls, and in the meantime I am,

Sincerely your friend,
James A. Blair.

Mr. George A. Lentz,
Huntington, Ga.

ON THE DEATH OF AN INFANT.

Germantown, Pa., Nov. 18, 19 –.

My dear Mary:—I realize that words of mine cannot comfort you in the loss of your darling little Jean, yet I feel that I must write a few words to assure you that I am thinking of you and praying for you.

With feelings of the deepest sympathy, I remain, dear friend,

Yours very sincerely,

Adele Hagar.

REPLY TO PREVIOUS LETTER.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 25, 19 –.

Dear Adele:—I cannot talk about my little one yet; but I am very grateful for your letter. Write to me when you can, for your sympathy and friendship help me to be strong.

Affectionately yours,

Mary.

LETTERS OF CONGRATULATIONS.

CONGRATULATIONS UPON RECEIVING A LEGACY.

Saluda, S. C., Jan. 1, 19 –.

Dear Harry:—I have learned to-day, through Hugh Wolcott, of your good fortune. Splendid! I congratulate you. I know of no one who more justly deserves riches, and of no one who will use them more wisely. I take a friend's delight in your happiness.

Sincerely yours,

Paul Lynch.

CONGRATULATIONS UPON AN APPROACHING MARRIAGE.

Oswego, N. Y., Dec. 2, 19 –.

Dear Miriam:—I have just learned from our mutual friend, Edith Brown, of your approaching marriage to Charles Thompson. I am very happy that you are the chosen bride of such a noble man. I am going to try to see you soon; meantime I send you all possible good wishes.

Your loving friend,

Helen Lees.

CONGRATULATIONS UPON A MARRIAGE.

Greenfield, Ind., April 4, 19 –.

Dear John:—I have just received a little missive, which informs me of two happy hearts made one. I wish you much joy. You have my earnest congratulations and good wishes for a long and serenely happy married life. May each succeeding year find you happier than the one before.

God bless you and yours, and surround you ever with His choicest gifts.

Your friend,

Charles H. Wilson.

CONGRATULATIONS UPON TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Independence, Cal., March 5, 19 –.

My dear Mr. Young:—I acknowledge the receipt of a kind invitation to be present at the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of your marriage. Owing to absence from the city on business, I was deprived of the pleasure of being with you.

I congratulate you and your good wife upon passing the milestone indicating a quarter of a century of blissful wedded life. That you may live to allow your friends to celebrate your golden and diamond weddings, is the hope of

Your sincere friend,

Robert Suter.

CONGRATULATIONS UPON THE BIRTH OF A SON.

Falcon, Tenn., Jan. 3, 19 -

Dear Wood:—Accept my warmest congratulations upon the birth of your son. May his years be long in the land which the Lord giveth him. May he honor his father and his mother, and be the blessing and support of their declining years. I anticipate holding the young gentleman on my knee, and will be over to see you in a few days.

With kindest regards to Mrs. Williams, I am,

Faithfully, your friend,

Fred Black.

CONGRATULATIONS UPON PASSING A SUCCESSFUL EXAMINATION.

Kingston, R. I., April 6, 19 -.

Dear Dorothy:—I was greatly pleased to hear through our friend Helen, that you had passed through the prescribed course of study in the Willet public school, and had graduated with honors. Knowing how deeply interested your parents and relatives have been in your success, it is particularly gratifying to have you reward them by such rapid progress. Accept my best wishes for your future success.

Your friend,

Susan Geller.

LETTERS OF INTRODUCTION.

INTRODUCING A MERCHANT TO ANOTHER.

Joplin, Miss., July 9, 19 -

Dear Jonathan:—The bearer of this, Mr. George Hunt, is a dry-goods merchant in our town, who visits your city for the purpose of making purchases for his fall trade. Mr. Hunt is a heavy dealer in his line, pays cash for all he buys, and expects the lowest prices and largest discounts. Any favor you can tender him by introducing him to your leading wholesale houses, or otherwise, will be appreciated by Mr. Hunt, and acknowledged by,

Your friend,

Mr. Jonathan Huey. Philip Gilman

INTRODUCING A LADY TO ANOTHER.

Burlington, Pa., April 10, 19 -.

Dear Grace:—I take this occasion to introduce to you the bearer of this letter, Mrs. John S. Palmer, who is on a visit to her relatives in your city. Mrs. P is my very dear friend, of whom you have often heard me speak. Believing that your acquaintance with each other would be mutually agreeable, I have urged her to call upon you during her stay. Any attention you may bestow upon her, during her visit, will be highly appreciated by,

Your friend,

Annie Connor.

INTRODUCING A CLERK.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 13, 19 -.

Dear Sanderson:—This letter will introduce to you my young friend, Otto Tames who has been in my employ as a clerk for the past eighteen months, and whom I would still retain, had not the depression in our line of business rendered his services, with those of others of my clerks, unnecessary

Believing that your wide influence will very materially aid him in securing a good position in the dry-goods trade in your city, I presume upon the acquaintance of an old friend, in thus writing you. For reference you can use my name.

Believing that you will not regret any assistance you render the young man I am, Your friend,

Henry L. Wilkins

Mr S. B. Sanderson.

INTRODUCING A YOUNG MAN TO A MEMBER OF CONGRESS.

Lebanon, Ky., March 3, 19 –.

Hon. S. B. Dickie,

Sir:—The bearer, Mr. John C. Philips, is the son of Mrs. Samuel Philips of this town, whose husband was one of our most respected citizens. This young man has just graduated from one of our schools, and at my suggestion visits Washington, wishing to see the Capitol, and at the same time learn the possibilities of securing a satisfactory position in one of the Departments, after passing the necessary Civil Service examination. If you can give him any help or advice in this matter, it will be warmly appreciated by his mother and myself.

Yours respectfully,

R. B. Fitzgerald.

REQUESTING PERMISSION FOR A DAUGHTER TO MAKE A VISIT.

Oberlin, O., May 6, 19 –.

My dear Mrs. Fitch:—In compliance with your oft-repeated request, I would like to send my daughter to spend a few weeks of her vacation in your delightful country home, trusting that her visit may be as pleasant for her and yourself as mine was a year ago. She could come next Monday if that would be entirely convenient for you.

Anticipating a visit from you before the close of the present summer, I remain, as ever,

Your devoted friend,

Ellen Bromley.

LETTERS OF APOLOGY.

APOLOGIZING FOR FAILURE TO PAY NOTE.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 11, 19 –.

Mr. R. W. Davidson

Dear Sir:—I very much regret that the failure of P. Dick & Son will prevent my payment of your note on the 20th instant, without serious inconvience to myself. I shall be able to pay it, however, promptly on the 25th. Should the five days' delay seriously incommode you, please write me at once, and I will endeavor to procure the money from another source.

Yours very truly,

Roy Johnston.

EXCUSE TO A TEACHER FOR NON-ATTENDANCE OF CHILD.

Friday Morning, Sept. 4, 19 –.

Dear Miss McCausland:

You will please excuse Blanche for non-attendance at school yesterday afternoon. She was detained in consequence of a severe headache.

Very respectfully,

Josephine Fister.

APOLOGY FOR BREAKING A BUSINESS ENGAGEMENT.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 15, 19 –.

Mr. Harold R. Lacey,
Galveston, Texas.

Dear Sir:—I very much regret being compelled to apologize for not meeting you at the railroad meeting in Houston last Saturday, as I agreed to do. The cause of my detention was the sudden and severe illness of my youngest child, whose life for a time we despaired of. Please write me the result of the meeting.

Hoping that the arrangements we anticipated were perfected, I am,

Very truly,

Ross N. Hood.

LETTERS OF REQUEST.

REQUESTING LOAN OF MONEY.

Pikeville, Ky., Feb 2, 19 -.

Dear Curtis:—Will you do me the kindness to loan me one hundred dollars until Wednesday of next week? Having several large collections to make during the next three days, I may be able to return the loan before then

Yours truly,

James Rostrom

ANSWER REFUSING THE REQUEST.

Pikeville, Ky., Feb. 2, 19 -.

Dear Rostrom:—I regret that all the money I have available, I am compelled to use this afternoon; otherwise I would comply with your request with pleasure.

Respectfully,

John Curtis.

REQUESTING A LETTER OF INTRODUCTION.

Dallas, Texas, March 4, 19 -.

Dear Scott:—I start for Boston to-morrow, to make arrangements for our excursion. I shall arrange to have the journey extend as far as the Holy Land. Be so kind, if you please, as to give me a letter of introduction to Professor John Ross, whom I hope, also, to enlist in the scheme.

With warmest regards to your family, I remain,

Very truly yours,

Frank Lewis.

GIFT LETTERS.

ACCOMPANYING BIRTHDAY GIFT.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 10, 19 -.

Dear Otto:—Please accept this little token of love and esteem on this anniversary of your birth. With all my heart I wish you many, many returns of the day.

Sincerely your friend,

William Kyle.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS LETTER.

Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 11, 19 -.

My dear William:—Your very valuable and welcome gift came to-day. I appreciate it very highly, and am especially gratified to know that in spite of your many cares you have not forgotten the birthday of your old friend. During my remaining years I will cherish your gift. Accept my warmest thanks, and remember me as,

Your constant friend,

Otto Brenz.

ACCOMPANYING GIFT TO CLERGYMAN.

The Rev. Isaac Kilmer,
Pastor of the 8th St. M. E. Church,

Dear Sir:—You will gratify us by appropriating to your own use the accompanying check. It is presented by your many friends in your congregation as a slight token of the very high esteem in which you are held by the people, as a Christian gentleman and an eloquent and instructive preacher.

Trusting that its acceptance will afford you as much pleasure as it has given us in the presentation, we are,

Very respectfully,

Dan Barton,
Frank Pyle,
S. Marion Lamb, } Committee.

ACCOMPANYING GIFT TO MANAGER.

New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 2, 19 –.

Mr. Harry H. Kuster,

Dear Sir:—The undersigned, employees of the Southeastern Dental Supply Co., deeply regretting your departure from among us, desire your acceptance of the accompanying memorial, in testimony of our affection and respect for you as a gentleman and a mechanic, and as a faint expression of our appreciation of your kindly efforts to render our connection with this factory not only pleasant and agreeable to ourselves, but profitable to the company.

Deeply regretting that our connection must be severed, we shall gratefully remember our association in the past, and hope always to be held in pleasant remembrance by you.

(Signed by the Employees.)

A PERSONAL LETTER FROM DICKENS TO JOHN FORSTER

Tues. night, 12th November, 1844.

I must not anticipate myself. But, my dear fellow, nothing in the world that ever you have heard of Venice, is equal to the magnificent and stupendous reality. The wildest visions of the Arabian Nights are nothing to the piazza of Saint Mark, and the first impression of the inside of the Church. The gorgeous and wonderful reality of Venice is beyond the fancy of the wildest dreamer. Opium couldn't build such a place, and enchantment couldn't shadow it forth in a vision. All that I have heard of it, read of it in truth or fiction, fancied of it, is left thousands of miles behind. You know that I am liable to be disappointed in such things through over-expectation, but Venice is above, beyond, out of all reach of coming near, the imagination of a man. It has never been rated high enough. It is a thing you would shed tears to see.

When I came on board here last night (after a five miles' row in a gondola, which, somehow or other, I wasn't at all prepared for); then, from seeing the city lying, one night, upon the distant water, like a ship, I came plashing through the silent and deserted streets; I felt as if the houses were reality—the water, fever madness. But when, in the bright cold bracing day, I stood upon the piazza this morning, by Heaven the glory of the place was insupportable! And diving down from that into its wickedness and gloom—its awful prisons deep below the water; its judgment chambers, secret doors, deadly nooks, where the torches you carry with you blink as if they couldn't bear the air in which the frightful scenes were acted; and coming out again into the radiant, unsubstantial Magic of the town; and diving in again, into vast churches, and old tombs—a new sensation, a new memory, a new mind came upon me. Venice is a bit of my brain from this time.

My dear Forster, if you could share my transports (as you would if you were here) what would I not give. . . . I never saw the thing before that I should be afraid to describe. But to tell what Venice is, I feel to be an impossibility. And here I sit alone, writing it: with nothing to urge me on, or goad me to that estimate, which, speaking of it to anyone I loved, and being spoken to in return, would lead me to form. In the sober solitude of a famous inn; with the great bell of Saint Mark ringing twelve at my elbow; with three arched windows in my room (two stories high) looking down upon the grand canal and away, beyond, to where the sun went down tonight in a blaze; and thinking over again those silent speaking faces of Titian and Tintoretto; I swear (uncooled by any humbug I have seen) that Venice is the wonder and the new sensation of the world!

If you could be set down in it, never having heard of it, it would still be so. With your foot upon its stones, its pictures before you, and its history in your mind, it is something past all writing of or speaking of—almost past all thinking of. You couldn't talk to me in this room, nor I to you, without shaking hands and saying "Good God, my dear fellow, have we lived to see this!"

CHARLES DICKENS

PARLIAMENTARY LAW.

RULES OF ORDER FOR DELIBERATIVE ASSEMBLIES.

ORGANIZATION.

When those who have agreed to meet for the purpose of organization are present, some one rises and says, "I move that Mr. or Mrs.—— act as chairman."

Some one else rises and says, "I second the motion."

The mover then says, "All in favor of the motion, say, aye." Ayes are counted.

The mover then says, "All opposed say, no." The noes are counted.

If the ayes have a majority, the mover says, Mr. or Mrs —— will please take the chair.

If the noes have a majority, the mover says, "I call for the nomination of some one else." And so he continues to call and to put motions till a majority agrees upon some one.

After agreement, he says, "Mr. or Mrs.—— will please take the chair."

The person selected will take the chair, say a brief word as to the honor conferred, and the object of the assembly, and then conclude with, "In order to further complete the organization, a motion is in order for the election of a secretary.

If only one motion is made and seconded in favor of a candidate (motions, except those of minor import, are not ready to be put till seconded) the chairman will say, "all in favor of the motion say aye." He will count the ayes.

Then he will say, "All opposed say, no." He will count the noes.

If a majority favor the motion, he will say, "Mr. or Mrs.—— has been elected secretary. He or she will please take the secretary's chair.

Sometimes other persons will wish to move that their favorite be elected secretary. It is the business of the chair to entertain all such motions, till satisfied that they are at an end.

When satisfied he will put the first motion. If carried by a majority, the other motions fail. If not carried, he takes up the second, and so on till a majority choice is indicated. In general, the chairman has a right to insist that all shall vote.

For a temporary assembly, a chairman and secretary, or secretaries, are all that is required. But for an organization that is expected to be permanent for a season, or for years, and where dues are a feature, other officers are required. There should be a vice-chairman or vice-president, a collector, a treasurer, a door-keeper, etc., dependent on the character of the organization. All these may be chosen in the manner laid down above for the election of a secretary. But it would be best to postpone their election for a little time, till discussion has been had of the object and character of the society or association, and until all are ready for the work of permanent organization. If the by-laws have been passed and prescribe the election of permanent officers by ballot, it would be well to elect all such officers in accordance with said by-laws.

And even if it be desirable to go on with permanent organization before the constitution and by-laws have been adopted, it would be best to elect the permanent officers, by receiving nominations and using the ballot. But as to this see the heading "Permanent Societies."

When the temporary or popular meeting has been organized, as above by the election of a chairman and secretary, or secretaries (political meetings generally announce a long list of vice-presidents and secretaries as honorary selections), the chairman should say (a chairman should always rise when he makes a proposition or motion) "What is the further pleasure of this meeting?"

Here it is proper for some one to rise and say," Mr. Chairman I move that a committee of three (or five—the number is arbitrary, but should not be too large) be appointed by the chair to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of this meeting

It must be understood that resolutions are the usual means of making known the wishes of an assembly, or of effecting a temporary government, where such assembly is a public and popular one, as the political meeting, the indignation meeting, the meeting in honor of some distinguished person, or of condolence over a death, the meeting looking to a permanent organization for a special object, etc.

The resolutions, in such cases, have generally been prepared beforehand by those who have consulted together and have called the meeting, and they have been entrusted to the keeping of the one who, by previous understanding, would make the above motion.

The chairman should rise, recognize the mover, by mentioning his name, hear the motion, see that it is seconded, repeat it to the assembly, and then say, "Are you ready for the question?"

If there is no discussion, he puts the question in the usual way, by saying, "All in favor of the motion say aye." "Contrary, no!"

If carried, the chairman appoints the committee, naming the mover of the motion as the first one on the committee, who thus becomes its chairman.

The oldest and best parliamentary usage requires that the mover of a motion to appoint a committee shall be the first on the committee, and that the first appointed on a committee shall be its chairman.

If the above motion has been lost, the chairman shall announce it as lost, and ask, "what is the further pleasure of the meeting?" This will bring up another line of procedure.

It is usual for the above committee to retire for a few moments to read over and adopt the resolutions, if they are already prepared, or to prepare resolutions, if not previously done. While they are gone, the chairman may announce the business of the assembly as suspended till the committee is ready to report, but it is better for him, in order to hold the assembly together, to say that the interval affords an opportunity for a general expression of views, and to call upon some one, whom he knows to be in sympathy with the object of the meeting, to entertain it. But if there is any regular business that can go on during the absence of the committee, it should be attended to.

When the committee is ready to report, its chairman announces the fact to the chairman of the assembly, by saying, "Mr. Chairman, your committee have agreed upon a series of resolutions and beg leave to report them." So saying, he passes the resolutions to the chairman or secretary.

The chairman of the assembly asks the secretary to read them, which he does. If the handwriting is unfamiliar to the secretary, the chairman should relieve him, by calling on the writer of the resolutions to read them, for much depends on a good reading of resolutions.

After the reading, the chairman says, "You have heard the resolutions, what is your pleasure respecting them?" or "what action will the assembly take upon them?"

Then some one rises and says, "Mr. Chairman I move the resolutions (or the report of the committee) be adopted." When the motion has been seconded, the chairman says, "Is the meeting (or assembly, or are you) ready for the question?"

Debate would now be in order. And at this point the object of the meeting is best met by a full expression of views, which the chairman should solicit, and give opportunity for.

When debate has been had upon the resolutions, and has ended, the chairman puts the question in the usual way If carried, the resolutions become the voice of the assembly, and the committee stands discharged.

The resolutions may have been modified by amendments, or referred back to the committee for change, all of which changes or modifications, if made by amendments in open assembly, must be recognized and stated by the chairman, in the final motion to pass them.

If the object of the assembly has now been met, some one moves to adjourn. The chairman puts the motion in the usual form, and then declares the meeting adjourned.

But a speedier way to handle resolutions in popular assemblies, where such resolutions have been prepared beforehand, and where their passage is expected to accomplish the object of the meeting, is for the one who has them in charge to rise and say, "Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the following resolutions." He then reads them, or hands them to the secretary to be read.

After reading, they are open to debate, as before; also for modification, rejection or acceptation. Full discussion of them, and final action upon them, generally accomplishes the object of the meeting.

PERMANENT SOCIETIES.

When the object is to form a permanent society for business, literary entertainment, scientific pursuit or pleasure—in which rank fall lyceums, social clubs, institutes, and all assemblies designed to perpetuate themselves—the preliminary steps are the same as already set forth, viz., a consultation among friends of the object in view, being careful that enemies are discarded, a call for the work of organization, a meeting at which a chairman and secretary shall be elected the first thing, and in the way already set forth. This puts the meeting under control.

The chairman then calls upon some one whom he knows to be most interested in the movement, or best qualified to set it forth, to state the object of the meeting. If the chairman himself is the best qualified, which is mostly the very reason he has been called upon to preside, he states the object of the meeting. Others may be given opportunity to state their views, but the chairman should control the time and insist on brevity.

But it is best for the one making the statement to conclude his remarks with a resolution, previously prepared and in writing, which resolution should be passed to and read by the secretary.

It may read, "Resolved, that it is the sense of this meeting that a society shall be formed in this (city, town or village) for the purpose of (state the object) which shall be known as the (state the name), (but the name can be left to the committee on constitution)."

This resolution should be open to the widest debate, after it has been seconded.

It should then be voted upon and, if carried, some one should rise and say, "I move that the chairman appoint a committee of three (five or any other number, the smaller the better) to draft a constitution and by-laws for such a society as has been agreed upon in the resolution just passed, and that said committee report at the next meeting (or at an adjourned meeting, or at a meeting called by the chairman or at the present session) of this assembly."

This motion is debatable. If it passes, the chair should appoint the committee, placing the mover first A motion to adjourn will now be in order, unless the committee's report is expected. Such motion should be made with a view to accommodating the committee, and should include the time and place of next meeting. As such it is debatable. But if it is simply a motion to adjourn, or to adjourn at the call of the chairman, debate is not in order.

The chairman then dismisses the meeting, repeating the words of the motion to adjourn.

At the next meeting, the officers of the former one are in charge, till superseded by permanent ones.

The chairman calls the meeting to order, and asks the secretary to read the minutes. The chairman then says, "You have heard the minutes, is there any reason why they should not be adopted?" If no one rises to object, he should say (without motion) "The minutes stand approved as read." If a correction has been made, he should say, "The minutes stand approved as corrected."

The chairman then says, "The next business in order is the hearing of the report of the committee on constitution and by-laws."

The chairman of said committee rises, and on being recognized, reads his report (or hands it to the secretary to be read).

After reading, the chairman of the meeting says, "You have heard the report of the committee, what is your pleasure respecting it?"

Some one may rise and say, "I move the adoption of the constitution and by-laws as reported by the committee." The chairman may entertain this motion, and put it. If it is carried, the constitution and by-laws become the organic law of the society.

But a much more satisfactory way is for some one to move that the constitution and by-laws be adopted seriatim. If this motion is carried, the chairman rises, reads the first article, or has the secretary read it, and says, "Are there any amendments to this article?"

If there are amendments, he must entertain motions to that effect. But if, after a pause, no amendments are made, he may say, "There being no amendments, I pass to the reading of the second article."

He then reads the second article, and asks the same question. He continues reading till through. He then says, "You have passed upon the constitution and by-laws, seriatim (or by sections), shall we adopt it (or them) as a whole?"

This is necessary, because opportunity to amend should never be cut off before the adoption of an instrument as a whole.

If no amendments are offered, at this stage, to the instrument as a whole, the chairman may say, "There being no amendments, all who are in favor of the adoption of the constitution and by-laws, as read (or as amended, if the sections have been amended) and as a whole, will say aye," He should count the ayes carefully. Then he should say, "All opposed will say no." He should announce the result distinctly.

The society has now an organic law and guide. Sometimes it is preferable to take separate action on the constitution and by-laws; even to have them referred to separate committees, and acted upon at different times. But whether this be so or not, as soon as the constitution is adopted, it is proper for the chairman to request of those present, who desire to become members, to come forward, pay their initiation fee, if one is required, and sign the constitution. A recess should be declared for this purpose.

If the by-laws have not been passed with the constitution, action on them would now be in order, and said action would be the same as that upon the constitution.

After the adoption of both, separately or together, the chairman should say, "The next business in order is the election of officers in accordance with our constitution."

If the constitution provides that a committee shall be appointed which shall nominate officers, a motion should be made for the appointment of such committee. The adoption of their report is the election.

But if the election is left to the society, the chairman should say, "Nominations for president (or whatever the presiding officer's title may be) are now in order." If no more than one nomination be made, the chairman may say, "There being only one nomination for president, I declare Mr. —— elected;" and, unless there is a provision to the contrary, or for formal installation, he may vacate his seat and ask the newly elected president to take it.

The new official then goes on with the election, announcing the respective officers to be voted for, calling for nominations, declaring elections where only one candidate is nominated, asking for a ballot where two or more candidates are in the field.

Generally speaking, it is best to begin an election by the appointment of tellers, so that they may be ready to act where there are two or more nominations. Tellers should occupy some central, conspicuous place, and may use a hat as a ballot box. The voters should write the name of their favorite on a piece of paper, and deposit it in the hat, and the tellers should announce their count to the chairman.

As each officer is elected he, or she, should take the seat appointed to him or her, displacing the temporary officers When all are thus elected and seated the permanent organization is effected.

When a society expects to own real estate, it should get a charter, or become incorporated according to the laws of its state

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

A committee appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws for a permanent society, should bear in mind the following:

(1) A constitution may be very full, thus necessitating few by-laws, or none at all.
(2) By-laws may be very full, thus necessitating a very brief constitution or none at all.
(3) A constitution should be brief. It ought to declare only the fundamental features of the society, as—
  (a) The name of the society.
  (b) The object of the society.
  (c) The components, or membership, of the society.
  (d) The officers of the society, the manner of their elections, and their duties and terms.
  (e) The times and place of meetings, in brief, leaving details to by-laws.
  (f) How to amend the constitution; and this should be made difficult. Nothing but ample notice and a two-third vote should be allowed to disturb it.
(4) The committee should consult the constitution and by-laws of kindred organizations and select what is best fitted for its own.
(5) By-laws should be full, and should cover all the details of official conduct and government. Among the principal questions they should settle are:—
  (a) What shall constitute a quorum.
  (b) Time and place of meeting, if not fixed in the constitution.
  (c) Salary of officers, if salaried.
  (d) Duties of members, their rights, and methods of admission.
  (e) Punishment of members.
  (f) Method of making and putting motions.
  (g) The parliamentary manual that shall govern deliberations
  (h) Fees or dues of members.
  (i) Manner of amendment.

Lastly, rules of order, which may run as follows, and which should be followed by the presiding officer, unless a motion is carried to reverse them, for convenience sake, or unless, in a plain emergency the chairman assumes to reverse them.

  (a) Calling of society to order.
  (b) Calling roll of officers.
  (c) Reading and approving of minutes
  (d) Admission of new members.
  (e) Communications, notices, and bills
  (f) Payment of dues.
  (g) Reports of standing committees.
  (h) Reports of special committees.
  (i) Unfinished business.
  (j) New business.
  (k) Debates, essays, readings, or whatever appertains to the general entertainment and good.
  (l) Transfer and announcement of receipts by financial official.
  (m) Adjournment.

(6) By-laws should be more easily amendable than a constitution. A majority vote ought to be sufficient, though a motion to amend ought to lay over till next meeting.

OFFICERS.

A chairman or president calls the society to order at the proper time, announces the business according to the order laid down, states and puts all questions, preserves quiet, decides all questions of order (subject to appeal). In putting questions and speaking, he should stand. When a member rises and addresses him he should recognize him by saying, "Mr.——"; or if two address him at the same time. he should say, "Mr.—— has the floor." He should not interrupt a speaker when in order, should be non-partisan, affable, yet firm, and should exercise his right to address the society, when necessary, by first calling some one else to take the chair, unless the question be one of order, when he need not leave the chair.

The secretary should keep an accurate account of the proceedings, in a permanent book. Of course this does not mean that he shall report speeches, essays, etc., and inconsequential matters. But he should take down every motion, or, better still, insist that the mover shall lay it on his table in writing. He should avoid all criticism, and record things done, rather than those said. He is the custodian of all papers of the society, not specially entrusted to other officers, is the correspondent, and should see that the constitution and by-laws are properly engrossed, preserved, and rendered accessible. Sometimes, he is the collector of dues, and is otherwise financially interested. In all such cases he should be prompt and accurate in his reports. In nearly every society the secretary is the most important official.

The treasurer is the final recipient of the funds of the society. He dispenses them, also, but upon orders drawn by other officials, usually the chairman and secretary. He should be careful in accounting for what he receives and expends, should give and take receipts, or vouchers, should make his reports regularly, and should insist upon an audit of his accounts in accordance with the laws of the society.

A vice-president performs the duties of president, when that official is absent.

There may be other officials, dependent on the character of the society, but their duties are usually fully specified in the constitution or by-laws. The above are the main officials of the ordinary society, and upon them the success of most organizations falls.

COMMITTEES.

Every organization, transient or permanent, popular or deliberate, should understand the value of committee work. When a new subject is broached, it ought to be referred to a committee, if it is at all important or intricate. The committee should be given plenty of time to consider it and to report. The reports of committees which have deliberated in secret, in quiet, and with time, are seldom rejected by assemblies; whereas, if the same subject were left to popular discussion, there would be no end to debate and no prospect of a conclusion. Regular business would be interfered with, tumult would ensue, and perhaps disorganization would follow.

Committees, in ordinary assemblies, should be small. Three members are enough. Said an old parliamentarian, "the best working committee is one of three members, two of whom are absent."

When a matter is of sufficient importance to be referred to a committee, a member should rise and say, "Mr. Chairman I move that the matter be referred to a committee of three, to be appointed by the chair," or "I move that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to" (state what the committee is expected to do).

It is always best to mention in the motion the number of the committee and that the chair shall appoint. This will save the chairman the trouble of asking, "Of how many shall the committee consist and by whom shall it be appointed?"

The first named on a committee is its chairman. He shall call the committee together and preside at its deliberations. But in his absence, a majority of the committee may meet and transact business, a majority of a committee being always a quorum. Committee business ought to be transacted just like that of the society itself, it being but a miniature society.

A committee report may begin, "The committee to which was referred the (state the subject) beg leave to submit the following report" (follow with the report).

The report may conclude with, "All of which is respectfully submitted," (followed by signatures of committeemen).

Sometimes two reports are made, one by a majority and one by a minority of the committee. The former should begin with "A majority of the committee to which was referred the (state subject) beg leave to report," etc.

The latter should begin with "A minority of the committee to which was," etc. Both reports are entitled to reading, but the minority report is not entitled to consideration except upon a motion to substitute it for the majority report.

When the report of a committee is accepted, the committee stands discharged without motion. A motion to refer back a report, or to recommit to the same committee, revives the committee.

MOTIONS IN GENERAL.

A motion is the usual form of bringing business before a society or assembly.

As a rule motions, if important, involved or lengthy, should be reduced to writing. They may be read by the mover and then handed to the chairman or secretary, or the secretary may, by request, do the reading. Where the motion is simple, it need not be reduced to writing, unless the by-laws require it; but in such case time should be given the secretary to make an accurate record of it.

When the motion is verbal, the member rises and says, "Mr. Chairman (the chairman recognizes him by name), I move that a committee of three be appointed," etc., etc., or "I move that" (stating the motion in brief).

When the motion is written it takes the form of a resolution, thus:—

"Resolved, that the thanks of the society be extended," etc., or, "Resolved that a committee of five be appointed," etc., etc.

If the way is clear for the chair to entertain the motion, that is, if there is no other business before the society to interfere with it or if the subject of the resolution falls under the head of business in hand, the member rises and says "Mr. Chairman (the chair recognizes him by name), I move the adoption of the following resolution." He reads it and passes it to the chairman.

Or, having first passed it to the secretary, he says, "Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the resolution, which the secretary will please read."

When the motion has been read and seconded, the chairman rises and says:—"It has been moved and seconded that the following resolution (which he reads) be adopted;" or, "It has been moved and seconded that the resolution you just heard read (or which the secretary will now read) be adopted."

It is any member's right to call for a re-reading of the resolution; and it is the business of the chair to see that it is fully understood by the members before putting the motion.

In large assemblies the motion in writing should be signed by the mover.

The chairman may continue. "The question is on the adoption of the resolution just read."

A pause is in order to give opportunity for a debate, and full debate is desirable upon motions involving new or important business. Such debates are usually opened by the mover, who is expected to explain and sustain his motion. If there is hesitation about debate, and the chairman thinks the matter worthy of discussion, he may urge the importance of discussion.

It cannot be too often repeated, nor too fully borne in mind, that no member of any assembly has a right to the floor and to speak till recognized by the chair. A chairman who does not rigidly enforce this rule will find himself helpless in the midst of clamor. The chairman does not lose control of a speaker whom he has recognized, but may call him to order, when he is out of order, as for instance when he is straying from the question or talking vulgarly or abusively. So the chairman must protect a speaker against interruption from other members; any member has a right to call an offensive speaker to order, by rising to a point of order.

If no one has risen to speak, or when the debate is closed, either by consent or by motion, the chairman rises and says:—"Are you ready for the question?"

If there is nothing to the contrary, the chairman says: "The question is on the adoption of the resolution you have heard read (or heard read and debated); as many as are in favor of its adoption, say aye" (counts the ayes). "As many as are opposed, say no" (counts the noes).

He then announces the result, saying, "The motion is carried" (or lost); or, the "Resolution stands adopted" (or is lost).

A majority of votes, in ordinary assemblies, is sufficient to carry a motion, if the motion be not one of an excepted kind, or if there be no by-law to the contrary

THE ORDINARY MOTIONS CLASSIFIED.

There is hardly any more interesting and useful study than the subject of motions. The object of most societies is to bring about a knowledge of them among members, in other words, to get acquainted with parliamentary science. A good parliamentarian is a most useful man in any community, and most of our greatest parliamentarians have laid the foundation of their future usefulness in the country lyceum or village debating school.

When a member has drafted and presented his resolution it is the property of the society. It may not be desirable to adopt it then and there, or in the shape presented. The handling of it, therefore, opens the way to a series, or class of motions whose meaning and effect ought to be fully understood, not only by the chairman but by the members.

This class of motions is peculiar in the respect that they are allowable while the resolution is under consideration. and have the effect of superseding it, though no member can move any of such motions except that which calls for the "Orders of the Day," or the "Regular Order of Business," while another member has the floor. (See Motion to Reconsider, further on.)

But before studying these motions further and settling the destiny of our resolution in the society, let us get a good idea of the motions in use in an ordinary assembly or society, for these are the motions that are going to seal the fate of our resolution in its way through the society.

This order of precedence, or the rank, and power, of these ordinary motions, appears thus:—

(1) Motion to fix a time to adjourn.
(2) Motion to adjourn (when unqualified).
(3) Motion for the orders of the day
(4) Motion to lay on the table.
(5) Motion for the previous question.
(6) Motion to postpone to a certain time
(7) Motion to commit.
(8) Motion to amend.
(9) Motion to postpone indefinitely.

The above order ought to be committed to memory. Any of the motions contained in the list except No. 8 (the motion to amend) can be made while one below it in the list is pending, but none can be made, except a motion to amend, while one above it is pending. Thus No. 1, or "a motion to adjourn to a fixed time," can be made while No. 5 is pending, but No. 5 cannot be made while No. 1 is pending. So No. 3 can supersede No. 9, but No. 9 cannot supersede No. 3. Any higher motion, except that to amend, can supersede a lower, but no lower motion, except that to amend, can supersede a higher.

As to what motions are debatable and amendable, and what not, and as to the more general effect of motions, we shall see further on.

It may as well be stated here that a "motion to reconsider" is always a privileged motion as to the making of it, but cannot be acted upon until the business then before the society is disposed of. When called up it takes precedence of every other motion except one to fix a time to adjourn, and one to adjourn, or Nos. 1 and 2 of the above list.

Now we go back to our resolution as introduced into the society and see what motions may constitute its fate, provided it is not desirable to adopt or reject it directly. Remembering what has already been said of the class of motions which may he brought to bear upon it, and also the rank, power, or order of precedence of motions, as shown in the foregoing list, we will start with the object the mover has in view. He may have in view

OBJECT I.—TO MODIFY OR AMEND.

(a) To Amend. (b) To Commit.

A motion to amend is the proper one where it is desired to modify the resolution before the society.

A motion to amend may be to add certain words or clauses, to strike out certain words or clauses absolutely, or to strike out and insert others; to substitute a different motion on the same subject (the chairman must be careful to see that the subject matter is not changed); or to divide the resolution into separate parts, so as to get a vote on each part.

Friends of a resolution may earnestly desire to amend it in one or all of the above ways; but it ought to be borne in mind that enemies of the resolution find in amendments, and especially in motions to divide, a favorite means of distracting its friends, and defeating the motion entirely.

When an amendment is moved the chairman should state it distinctly and should read in connection the clause affected. He should mention the words to be struck out, or the words to be inserted, and then should read the clause as it would read if amended. The amendment, if seconded, has precedence of the original motion and is open to debate, but the chairman should see that all remarks are confined to the merits of the amendment alone. The main question should not be considered in debate except in so far as is necessary to explain and ascertain the merits of the amendment.

In putting the motion to amend, the chairman should ask, "are you ready for the question?" and should count ayes and noes, and decide, just as if it were the main question.

An amendment of an amendment should be treated in the same way. It is a separate, independent question, and takes precedence of the amendment. But the chairman and all members should be on their guard lest it be not germane, for the further you get away from the main question the greater danger there is of losing sight of the main question.

There can be no motion to amend an amendment of an amendment. It would be too foggy. Motions which are undebatable are, for the most part, not amendable. But we shall see more of this hereafter.

If the original question is novel, confused, or unclarified by amendments, it is a wholesome proceeding to move to refer it to a committee for further consideration. This, if carried, takes it out of the hands of the society for the time, allays excitement and leads to a better form of presentation. Both friends and enemies can use such a motion to advantage. Such a motion is known as a "motion to commit," or a "motion of reference." A "motion to commit" can be made while an amendment is pending (since 7 precedes 8 in the foregoing list).

A "motion to commit" is debatable, and it opens the merits of the whole question, or resolution, to debate. A "motion to commit" is amendable, but only as to the number of the committee, how it shall be appointed, where it shall sit, when it shall report, etc. Amendments designed to defeat the main object of the motion are not germane, and the chairman should so declare them.

OBJECT II.—TO DEFER ACTION.

(a) To Postpone. (b) Lie on the Table.

It may be that the introduction of the question is premature, and that another time for its consideration would be preferable. If so, the proper step is to move to "postpone to a certain time." The time may be to a later hour in the session, or to another order of business, or to the next, or another session. If it pass over to a next, or another, session, it should be called up under the head of "unfinished business."

This "motion to postpone to another time," is debatable, but only in a limited sense. Debate must be confined strictly to the propriety of postponement to the time specified. It is amendable, but only in respect to the time, and this amendment has the same limitations as to debate.

This "motion to postpone to a certain time," which is No. 6, of the foregoing list, can be made while Nos. 7, 8, and 9 are pending.

If it is not desired to postpone the question to a certain time, perhaps it may be deemed proper to lay it aside temporarily, till some other business is concluded, but in such a way as to not lose sight of it, or lose the privilege of taking it up again. The only way to do this is to move that the question "lie on the table."

This motion is not debatable nor subject to amendment. The chairman puts it promptly and announces the result. It is an heroic motion, and is often used by the enemies of a measure to supress it. It lays the matter in hand aside till some one moves "to take it from the table," which motion is not debatable and is not privileged.

OBJECT III.—TO SUPRESS DEBATE.

(a) The Previous Question. (b) Closing Debate.

Free debate, however desirable, often becomes a weapon in the hands of a minority. It may be used to prolong sessions indefinitely, and to shove off a vote on important resolutions. It is therefore necessary to limit it to proper bounds. This may be done in two ways: First:—By a call for the "previous question," by any member who chooses to make the call. This call must be seconded like a motion. It is not debatable nor subject to amendment. The chairman instantly rises and says, "Shall the main question now be put?" If this is carried, all debate is cut off instantly, except where the measure has been reported by a committee, when the member reporting it is entitled to the courtesy of a closing speech, usually brief.

It must be borne in mind that this motion to "put the main question" is exceptional in the respect that it requires or should require, a two-thirds vote to sustain it. This relieves it of the odium of an attempt to gag the minority.

If the "main question" is carried by the requisite majority, the chairman immediatey begins to clear off all the motions that are pending, and which are below the motion for the "main, or previous, question," on the foregoing list. He puts the motion "to commit," if one is pending, which, if carried, sends the matter back to the committee. If lost, he puts the motion to amend, if one is pending. If carried, he puts the motion on the original resolution as amended; or if the amendment has been lost, he puts the motion on the original resolution, Thus the object in calling the "previous question" has been accomplished.

The "previous question" call and motion, applies to an amendment, a motion to postpone, a motion to reconsider or an appeal. In all these instances it affects only the subject or motion to which it applies, and debate on the main question is still open.

But it may not be desirable to cut off debate entirely, by ordering the "previous question." It may be desirable to limit it only. In such case a motion may be made to "limit debate." This motion may limit the speeches to five (or other) minutes; may limit them to two (or other number) on each side; may fix an hour or minute for closing the debate. Motions to limit debate come up very often in the shape of amendments. Like the "previous question," "motions to limit" should have a two-thirds majority, especially in societies where debate is an object and harmony desirable.

OBJECT IV.—TO SUPPRESS THE QUESTION.

(a) Objections to Consideration. (b) Indefinite Postponements. (c) To Lie on the Table.

If the resolution is worthless and unfit for consideration, the best way to dispose of it is for a member to "object to its consideration." This need not be seconded, and it enables the chairman to say immediately, "Will the assembly or society, consider the question?" If two-thirds decide against it, the question is dismissed for the session. But when one feels called upon to "object to the consideration" of a measure, he should rise immediately after it is introduced, for his objection cannot be entertained when another member has the floor, nor after the measure has become the subject of debate.

If debate has set in, and it appears desirable to suppress the question, the proper motion is "to postpone indefinitely." This motion cannot be made when any other motion, except the main question, is pending, as it is the least privileged of all motions, as may be seen from its low place on the foregoing list. It opens the main question to debate and is a slow means of accomplishing its object.

Much more effective is the motion that "the question lie on the table." This is not debatable nor amendable. The chairman may put it at once, and when carried the matter is disposed of for the session, or, at least, till a majority choose to call it up.

OBJECT V.—TO RECONSIDER.

To adopt, reject or suppress a measure is to finally dispose of it for the session, unless some one chooses to revive it by a "motion to reconsider." This is the only means of bringing a passed measure before the society. This motion can be made only by one who voted with the majority before, and it must be made on the day or at the session the former vote was taken. It can be made in the midst of debate and when another member has the floor (this only for the purpose of getting it on the minutes), but it cannot be considered while any other measure is pending. When, however, it is called up for consideration, it takes and keeps precedence of every other question, except a motion to adjourn, or to fix a time or for adjournment. If the original question was debatable, the "motion to reconsider" is debatable, and debate extends to the entire merits of the original question. But if the original question was undebatable, the "motion to reconsider" is undebatable.

If the "motion to reconsider" is carried, the original question is again fully before the society

A motion to reconsider need not be acted upon on the day, or at the session, it is made. It may be entered on the minutes, and called up on the next day or session, either by the mover or by some one for him. But if a day or session, within a month, intervene, the motion dies. Time defeats its object.

A "motion to adjourn" cannot be reconsidered. But, being a privileged motion, it can be renewed, as often as desirable, if it has been previously lost.

OBJECT VI.—ORDER AND RULES.

(a) Rules of Order. (b) Special Order. (c) Suspension of Rules (d) The Question of Order. (e) Appeal.

As has been seen, every society should have an "Order of Business," "Orders of the Day," which the chairman is expected to adhere to. If debate on any question has grown tedious, or precious time is being wasted in dispute, or in consideration of a subject of less importance than the regular business, a member may arise and call for the "Regular order of business," or the "Orders of the day." This call need not be seconded, but the chairman may at once arise and say, "Will the society proceed with the regular order of business?" He may put the question without waiting for a motion, and, if carried, the matter under consideration is laid aside, and the chair proceeds with the regular order of business. If the motion fails, a call for the "regular order of business" cannot be renewed till the matter in hand is disposed of.

When a matter is of sufficient importance to be worthy of special consideration, a motion is in order to make it a "special order." This takes it out of the "regular order of business" and gives it instant consideration. Such a motion is debatable and amendable, and since it works a suspension of the rules of order, it requires, a two-thirds vote to pass it, though it can be postponed by a majority vote.

Analogous to the above motion is one to suspend the "Rules of Order, or Business."

A motion to "suspend the rules," should conclude with "in order to consider" (naming the object). Such a motion is not debatable nor amendable and requires a two-thirds vote. If passed, the subject, on whose account the rules were suspended, can be taken up and considered.

When the propriety of suspending the rules is apparent, the chairman may say, "Unless there be objection I declare the rules suspended in order to consider," etc., etc.

When there is a breach of order, any member may rise to a "point of order," and say, "Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order." This may be done, and is mostly done when one is speaking. It is the business of the chairman to entertain the point of order, and to direct the speaker to take his seat, till the point of order is heard and disposed of. If the chair sustains the "point of order," he warns the speaker to avoid a second breach of order, and permits him to go on. But if a member objects to his continuing, after he has committed a breach of decorum, e cannot go on till the society has voted to grant him permission.

Instead of "rising to a point of order," a member may simply rise and say, "I call the gentleman to order." The chair will pass on the question of order as before. This step is common where a speaker is using vulgar and disorderly language, or making personal attacks.

The decision of the chair respecting all questions of order, interpretation of rules, order of business, etc., etc., are the subject of appeal, and any member may enter an appeal to the society or assembly. An appeal is debatable but not amendable. It must be seconded like any other motion. After being seconded, the chair states his decision and the fact of appeal and says, "Shall the decision of the chair stand as the judgment of the society or assembly?" Before he puts the question, he may give the reasons for his decision. All the other members may speak on the question, but debate is limited to one speech each. After the vote is taken the chair announces the result, as after other motions.

In some instances "appeals" are not debatable, as where the decision is upon priority of business, indecorous conduct, breach of rules of speaking, or when the previous question is pending.

OBJECT VII.—PRIVILEGE AND ADJOURNMENT.

When a member who has made a motion wishes to withdraw it, he cannot do so, if any one objects, except upon a motion carried, to grant him permission.

When a speaker desires to read a paper out of the usual order, he must get permission by motion carried, if any one objects.

When the rights of the society or any of its members have been interfered with, a member may rise to a "question of privilege." If the chair decides it to be a question of privilege (an appeal from his decision is allowable), it takes precedence of other business, and is, of course, debatable. Debate can be cut off by moving the previous question, or it can be postponed, laid on the table, or referred to a committee.

There are two motions to adjourn, one qualified, the other absolute.

The first may run as follows: 'Moved, or resolved, that when this society adjourns, t adjourns to meet at (both time and place, if necessary)." Such a motion ought to be introduced and passed early in a session. It is subject to amendment as to time or place, and is always in order except when a member has the floor, being No. 1 on the forego ng list; but if made when another motion is pending, it is not debatable, nor is an amendment to it.

The simple, or unqualified, "motion to adjourn," admits of no debate nor amendment. It may be introduced at any time, except when a member is speaking, and even then, if he will yield for the purpose. The chairman puts the motion as soon as moved and seconded and announces the result. If carried he says "this society stands adjourned." If the adjournment is final he adds the words "sine die."

GENERAL RULES.

A speaker should address all his remarks to the chairman.

He should strive to be brief and pointed. He should confine his remarks to the subject under consideration, avoid personalities, and reflections upon an opponent's motives. Every society or assembly ought to provide in its by-laws for the length of time and the number of times its members may be permitted to speak on a question, except with the consent of a majority.

If the assembly be very large, provision should be made for a "committee of the whole," in which speech is without limit.

When a motion has been made the chairman should repeat it, in deliberate clear tone.

In general, the chairman should insist that a motion be seconded. But if it be evident that many are in favor of it, or if it be a mere routine motion, he may put it without its being seconded.

Motions calling for the regular order of business, or raising questions of order, or interposing objections to the consideration of a question do not need to be seconded.

A common form of putting a question is, "It is moved and seconded that (state the motion)."

If a resolution, it is proper to say, "The question is on the adoption of the resolution just read."

In cases of appeal from his decision, the chair should give his reasons for the decision, and should take care that the decision is fully understood.

In matters of amendment, all words struck out, or inserted, should be plainly read and understood, and the motior as amended should be repeated before being put.

The manner of voting is generally provided for in the by-laws. But if not, the chairman may say:—

"As many as are in favor of the motion will say, aye; those opposed, no."

Or he may say:—"All who favor the motion will hold up their right hands those opposed will give the same sign."

When the vote is close, or great confusion exists, the chairman may say, "All who favor the motion will stand up to be counted; those opposed will rise to be counted."

When two members rise to speak at the same time, the chairman must decide who is entitled to the floor. In making this decision, preference must be given to the member who made the motion or brought the matter before the society, to a committeeman who made the report, to a member who has not previously spoken, to the one who is opposed to the last speaker, rather than to the one who favors him.

A speaker cannot be interrupted by calls or motions, except a motion to reconsider, a call to order, an objection to consideration, call for regular order of business, or question of privilege.

A mover of a motion can recall it or modify it before it has been stated by the chairman, but not afterwards, except with the consent of the society.

When a mover modifies his motion, the seconder can withdraw his second.

Routine motions need not be seconded. A chairman may even dispatch routine work without a motion, thus:—"You have heard the minutes read; if no objections are offered, they will stand approved (pause). There being no objections, I declare the minutes approved as read.

Leading motions, amendments and committee instructions should be in writing.

Members should be willing to serve in office and on committees. Holding other office or serving on two or more other committees is a good excuse for declination of new service.

Acceptance of a committee's report does not discharge the committee, where it has contracted debts. A committee should see that its debts are paid.

In case of a tie vote the chairman has the casting vote

DICTIONARY OF ALL THE MOTIONS.

While the ordinary motions already discussed may embrace all that the every-day parliamentarian will find necessary in conducting the smaller assembly or carrying on the usual lyceum or society, they by no means exhaust the list of motions which find a place in parliamentary science.

It is now our purpose to present an alphabetical list of the motions as found in the "Rules of Order" governing deliberative assemblies, and as approved and used in Congress, Legislatures and other important organizations.

This alphabetical arrangement will enable the reader to turn to the motion he wishes to study. He will find it treated as a word in a dictionary, the explanation of its quality and effect being, as it were, its definition.

Adjourn.—A motion to adjourn is in order except when a speaker has the floor, unless he yields for the purpose; requires a second; requires only a majority vote; cannot be reconsidered, but can be renewed; cannot be amended; does not open main question to debate; is not debatable.

Adjourn to a fixed time.—A motion to adjourn to a fixed time is in order, except when a speaker has the floor; requires to be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended, as to time and place; does not open the main question to debate; debatable as a rule, but not debatable if made when another question is pending.

Amend.—A motion to amend is not in order when a speaker has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended: does not open main question to debate; is debatable

Amend an amendment.—A motion to amend an amendment is not in order when a speaker has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open main question to debate; is debatable.

Amend the rules.—A motion to amend the rules is not in order when a speaker has the floor; must be seconded; requires a two-third vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is debatable.

Appeal, as to decorum, etc.—An appeal from the decision of the chair on questions of decorum is in order when another has the floor; requires to be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; undebatable, as a rule, but permission may be given to debate, and then no member is allowed to speak more than once; a tie vote sustains the chair.

Appeal, all other kinds.—Appeals (except as before) are in order when another has the floor; must be seconded; require only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended: do not open the main question to debate; are debatable.

Call to order.—A call to order can be made while another has the floor; does not require a second; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered, cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Close debate.—A motion to close debate is not in order when another has the floor; it must be seconded; requires a two-third vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Commit.—A motion to commit, or refer, to a committee, is not in order when another has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; opens the main question to debate; is debatable.

Extend.—A motion to extend the limits of debate is not in order when a speaker has the floor; requires to be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Fix the time to which to adjourn.—See Adjourn, fix the time to. That definition holds here.

Leave to continue speaking.—This motion bears directly on "Appeal relating to indecorum," which is undebatable, except with leave. See that motion. It is not in order when another has the floor; requires to be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Lie on the table.—A motion that a resolution lie on the table, or to lay a resolution on the table, cannot be made while another has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; cannot be reconsidered if carried, but can be reconsidered if lost; cannot be amended; does not open consideration of the main question; is undebatable.

Limit to debate.—A motion to limit debate is not in order when another is speaking; must be seconded; requires a two-third vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Objections to consideration.—A motion to object to the consideration of a question, usually to the further consideration of a question, is in order when another has the floor; does not require to be seconded; requires a two-third vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable. This motion to object to consideration can only be made when the question is first introduced for debate

Orders of the day.—A call or motion for the orders of the day, or regular order of business, can be made when another has the floor; it does not require to be seconded; it requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Postpone to a certain time.—A motion to postpone to a certain, or fixed time, cannot be made when another has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; does not open the main question to debate; allows of only limited debate on the question of postponement only.

Postpone indefinitely.—A motion to postpone indefinitely cannot be made when another has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; opens the main question to debate; is debatable.

Previous question.—A call or motion for the previous question cannot be made while another has the floor; must be seconded; requires a two-third vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable; if adopted, it cuts off debate, and brings the assembly to face the pending motions, as the motion to commit, the motion to amend, etc., which must be cleared away so as to get at the main question, which is, under the previous question, undebatable.

Privilege.—All questions, or motions, of privilege are undebatable; do not open the main question; are amendable; can be reconsidered; require only a majority vote; must be seconded; are not in order when another has the floor.

Reading papers.—Courtesy largely controls the introduction and reading of papers, but where motion is required, it cannot be introduced when another has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Reconsider.—A motion to reconsider has two phases.

It may be a motion to reconsider a debatable question, or a motion to reconsider an undebatable question. If a motion to reconsider an undebatable question, it can be moved when another has the floor, but only for the purpose of entering it on the minutes; such motion cannot be allowed to further interrupt business; must be made on the day, or at the session on which the original vote was taken; must be moved by one who voted on the prevailing side, consideration must be had not later than the next day or session; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; cannot be reconsidered; cannot be amended; opens main question to debate; is debatable.

But if a motion to reconsider a debatable question, then all of the above holds good, except that the motion becomes debatable, and its discussion does not open the main question to debate.

Refer.—See "Commit."

Rise.—This is the motion to adjourn a sitting of a committee. It is precisely like the motion to adjourn, which see.

Shall the question be discussed?—Identical in effect with "Objection to Consideration," which see.

Special order.—A motion to make a question or matter the subject of "special order," cannot be moved when another has the floor; must be seconded; requires a two-third vote; can be reconsidered; can be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is debatable.

Substitute.—Same as to "Amend."

Suspend the rules.—A motion to suspend the rules is not in order when a member is speaking; must be seconded; requires a two-third vote; cannot be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Take from the table.—A motion to take from the table a subject which lies there, cannot be made when another has the floor; must be seconded, requires only a majority vote; cannot be reconsidered if the vote is in the affirmative, but may be reconsidered if the vote is in the negative; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Take up question out of proper order.—A motion to this effect is the same as one to "suspend the rules," except that it may be reconsidered. See "Suspend the Rules."

Withdrawal.—A motion to withdraw a motion cannot be made when another is speaking, or has the floor; must be seconded; requires only a majority vote; can be reconsidered; cannot be amended; does not open the main question to debate; is undebatable.

Be it understood, in closing, that every society or association has a right to make its own "Rules of Order" or parliamentary code; but since this would render its constitution and by-laws very prolix and confused, it is customary to sanction, in them, the use of some recognized authority on parliamentary affairs.

What is here presented embraces the gist of all parliamentary codes that have found sanction in the highest deliberative bodies. It will be found adequate to the wants of the popular assembly, as well as to the needs of the tens of thousands of permanent societies which dot our land.

WHAT TO SPEAK AND HOW TO SAY IT.

SUGGESTIVE FORMS FOR SPEECHES ON VARIOUS OCCASIONS.

REMARKS OF PRESIDENT UPON TAKING CHAIR

I thank you, Ladies and Gentlemen, for the honor you have conferred upon me in selecting me to preside over the deliberations of your society during the coming year I value the compliment especially as coming from a society, the members of which are so intelligent and well-informed. I esteem the honor, also, because you have bestowed it upon me of your own free will, entirely unsolicited upon my part, and I prize it because I hope in my humble way, in this position, to aid you in the accomplishment of that object for which we labor in common.

I cannot forsee what the future will be. That is always uncertain; but I hope that our work together will be both pleasant and productive of good results.

I enter upon my duties with a full realization of the fact that my success will depend largely upon your support and co-operation. Hoping for that, I assume the position and trust that I may discharge its duties, partially at least to your satisfaction.

INTRODUCING SPEAKER OF THE EVENING.

You all know the purpose for which we have gathered here this evening—To organize a Village Improvement Association. The need of such an organization is very apparent to all of us. We want better streets, better lights, a more modern school, improved transportation facilities. In fact, our needs are legion. The experience of other communities situated similarly to ours has demonstrated that we can obtain these things by intelligent co-operation. For the purpose of discussing these matters, and deciding upon the best means of attaining these much desired objects, we must have a formal organization of some sort. In order that we may better understand how such an organization may be formed and be made beneficial to our community, we have invited Mr. John D. Rose of Daytona, who has had wide experience in such matters, and is now secretary of a similar association, to be present and give us the benefit of his experience and advice. We are very much indebted to Mr. Rose for his cordial acceptance of our invitation, and I have great pleasure in now presenting him to you.

TEACHER'S REMARKS AT OPENING OF SCHOOL.

Boys and Girls:—I have been chosen as your instructor during the coming term of school, and my hope is that all our intercourse together may be both pleasant and profitable. There is just one rule that it will be very important for us both to observe, and that is, "the golden rule"—the doing unto others as we would have others do unto us. I expect you to do to me as you would be done by were you a teacher and I the pupil, and I will try to do the same by you.

I doubt not you all hope to grow to be educated men and women, having such a training as will fit you to take any place in life that you may attain to. I hope you have an ambition to acquire knowledge and having that, I expect to assist you all I can in getting it.

Now, to accomplish what we have undertaken, it will be necessary for you to do some things. Among these will be coming to school regularly; punctually at the opening of each session; abstaining from talking during school-hours, and an earnest resolve that you will be perfect in your lessons.

But I will lay down no rules now. I hope and expect that few rules will be needed. We will now begin the exercises of the school.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

SENATOR WOLFE:—These gentlemen and myself represent the citizens of Pueblo and we have been instructed by them to give you a hearty welcome to our city.

Although this may possibly be your first visit here, we do not look upon you as a stranger, for your fame has preceded you, and in our homes your name is well known in connection with your honorable record as a statesman, and the important measures which have distinguished you in our national councils. Moreover, you have often spoken brave words in our behalf as a commercial and manufacturing city—words for which we heartily thank you, and we gladly welcome you here to-day.

We do not propose, in welcoming you, to weary you with a lengthy address, but we hope to make your sojourn with us a source of pleasure and recreation. For this purpose, arrangements have been perfected for escorting you to such places as we deem will interest you, and to provide such other entertainment as hospitality may suggest for your comfort and convenience.

We have provided suitable apartments for you at the ——— Hotel, and shall be pleased to regard you as our guest while you remain in this city.

Should it be consistent with your wishes and other arrangements, we trust you will allow us to announce a public reception to-morrow evening, at your hotel, in order that your numerous friends may be enabled to express their welcome to you in person.

NOMINATING A CANDIDATE FOR OFFICE.

MR. CHAIRMAN:—I present the name of Warren L. Branson, as a candidate for the office of Mayor. I believe him to be, under present conditions, the strongest man that can be selected. Whatever may be the personal choice of individuals, it is necessary, upon this occasion, to choose as a candidate an individual whose personal popularity, with all classes, will carry the largest vote.

There are many important issues before the people at the present time. There are principles involved in which we are all deeply interested. We cannot afford to lose the coming election. A defeat at this time would be a disaster to the party. Hence the need of selecting a man who will unite all factions, and, while he can be sure of election, will, when in the place, fill the office with honor to himself and credit to the city. I nominate, as our candidate for Mayor, Warren L. Branson.

PRESENTING A GIFT TO TEACHER.

MISS SPICER:—I have been asked by the members of this class to present to you, in their name, this little book of poetry.

In presenting this testimonial, I assure you in behalf of your pupils that, as a patient teacher, a wise counselor and a most excellent instructor, you will ever be remembered by your scholars with feelings of the highest regard and esteem.

We look back over the period during which we have received instruction from you with sincere pleasure. We recollect your efforts in our behalf with grateful remembrance, and we learned of your intended resignation as a teacher, with sincere regret.

In the turning of the pages of this volume you will, we hope, be reminded of those who presented it. In that remembrance of us please do not recollect the dullness we have often shown, and the disobedience, we fear, we have sometimes manifested. But please remember that we shall endeavor to profit by the instruction you have given, and when we are far separated from each other, it may please you to know that we consider that we are better as well as wiser from the instruction we have received from you.

RESPONSE TO ABOVE.

My Dear Pupils:—I receive and accept your beautiful gift with much pleasure; first, because the volume, itself, is one which I shall highly prize, and, second, because it comes to me as a token of your appreciation of my efforts since I have had the pleasure of being with you.

I assure you I will turn its pages in happy recollection of the pleasant faces I have met in this room during my school duties. I will always remember your many evidences of love and regard for me, and your efforts to make my work as light and agreeable as possible.

I thank you, for this beautiful testimonial, and also for the assurance you give me, that, as I read its pages, I may be reminded that you not only hold me in kindly remembrance, but are resolved to profit by the teaching that has been given here.

My earnest hope is that your future life may realize all that your school-days now seem to promise. Knowing you as I do, I expect you, in noble manhood and womanhood, to honor this school by your future lives of usefulness, prosperity and happiness.

PRESENTING GIFT TO CLERGYMAN.

Dr. Hobbs:—For more than four years past, we, as members of your church and congregation, have profited by your ministrations, and within that period you have greatly endeared yourself to us by your amiable character, your earnest devotion to duty, and the hearty interest you have manifested in our welfare as a people.

In the pulpit you have faithfully presented the precepts of our religion, have warned us against the evils that continually beset us, and have earnestly pleaded with us to seek our truest happiness in the paths of rectitude, and peace.

In our homes you have been our sincere and sympathizing counselor and friend. In our hours of pain and sorrow you have spoken gentle and soothing words to our troubled hearts; our children have profited by your instruction; you have united our sons and daughters in holy wedlock; your benediction has rested upon us in our domestic and business affairs, and in all things you have proven yourself our competent and loving pastor.

With a deep sense of your many benefactions, those assembled here have requested me, in their name, to present to you this beautiful watch as a token of our mutual and increasing admiration and esteem for yourself, and of our gratitude for your labors in our behalf. We ask you, sir to accept it as freely as we offer it; for it is fitting that you who are daily and hourly preparing us for the joys of Eternity, should bear about you this monitor of passing Time, ever making, as we sincerely hope, hours, days and many years of happiness for you and your family.

RESPONSE TO ABOVE.

My Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I am greatly moved at this new manifestation of your affection and esteem. Since I first came among you, an entire stranger, four years ago, you have become very near and dear to me. You have so freely bestowed on me your confidence and generosity that I feel as though I had always known and loved you as your pastor. Your sympathy and encouragement have always been freely given, and as gratefully appreciated.

In accepting this exquisite watch, my heart glows with renewed joy in your service, for it assures me that your friendship is not for an hour or a day, but for all time; and it shall be my earnest endeavor to continue to merit in future, the esteem which you have admirably expressed. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your magnificent gift and the kind words accompanying it. I trust our ties as pastor and people may unite us closer and closer in the bonds of Christian love through time and eternity.

PRESENTING TESTIMONIAL TO A RAILROAD OFFICIAL.

Mr. Mansfield:—We have learned with great regret of your intention to resign your office as General Manager at the close of the present month, and wish to express, in some degree, the esteem with which we regard you, and our admiration for your character.

During the many years in which you have so ably controlled the machinery of this great corporation, each one of us, has had reason to remember your many acts of forbearance and words of kindness; for many times, when we have unintentionally neglected a duty or made a mistake, we have always received friendly consideration at your hands. You have given us gentle counsel and encouragement; and in this way you have made us your sincere friends, and taught us faithfulness in our respective departments. For all this we now gratefully thank you.

But we would not confine our gratitude to mere words. We have purchased this chronometer watch, which we ask you to accept as our parting gift. As a railway officer, you know the value of correct time, and the necessity of always being "on time," and we deemed it, therefore, an appropriate present. Whenever you look upon its face, will you not think of it as a memento of our long and pleasant relations? Our good wishes will go with you wherever you may go.

PRESENTING TESTIMONIAL TO A RETIRING PUBLIC OFFICER.

MR. WAGNER:—A few more days and the term of your office will expire. We had hoped until after the recent election, that you might have held it still longer; but the people have determined otherwise, and we must bow submissively to the will of the majority.

You step down from public to private life without the loss of one worthy qualification that you possessed when you entered upon your official duties. Nor has the tongue of slander, in all the lapse of time since then, been able to stain a single attribute of your character. Malice has been unable to smirch you by its persistent opposition, and your course has been in every way satisfactory to your constituents.

We have been proud of you in your high position, and we are none the less proud of you now. In fact, we are so proud of you that at the first opportunity we propose to elect you to a higher office than that which you now relinquish.

Looking about for some suitable testimonial to present to you, as a token of our admiration and good wishes, we remembered your public spirit, benevolence and love of country, and decided, sir, to ask your acceptance of this engrossed and framed copy of Washington's Farewell Address. Its money-value is small; but with it we give you our unfeigned appreciation of your labors in our behalf and that of our common country.

RESPONSE TO ABOVE.

GENTLEMEN:—I thank you not less for your hearty words of encouragement and esteem than for this beautiful memento of the patriotism and wisdom of the Father of his Country.

In all my experience of public life, it has been my endeavor to avoid sectional prejudice and to labor for the best interests of our entire State. Yet, in all those hours of solititude concerning public affairs, my heart has warmly turned to my constituents for encouragement and approbation, and I have not failed to receive at your hands the most gratifying assurance that I was pursuing a satisfactory course in whatever I undertook in your behalf.

You say you are proud of me. I believe you, but you are not prouder of me than I am of my constituents, and it has been a pleasure to serve you to the best of my ability. I know not to what fields of public duty I may be called in the future, but I now step down with a feeling of relief, and the assurance that my labors have not been in yain.

Again I thank you for your kind appreciation and for this enduring testimonial of your esteem.

SPEECH AT A CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

FRIENDS AND SCHOLARS OF THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL:—We assemble here to-night to make our holiday still more pleasant by the exercises of this occasion, and as I look into the expectant faces of these boys and girls, that I see before me, we ask what does this evergreen, hung with a profusion of articles to be distributed among the pupils of this school, mean?

It means that good parents and kind friends have made it possible for you to attend this Sabbath-school in the past year. It means that you have been blessed with a most able and efficient pastor, who presides over the ministration of this church. It means that your school has been managed by a superintendent who is solicitous for your welfare. It means that faithful teachers have labored throughout the year for your welfare; and together, with pastor, superintendent, teachers and friends, all hold you in kindly remembrance to-night.

And now, my young friends, what do you propose to give back in exchange for all this kindness bestowed upon you in the last twelve months? These gifts cannot all be upon one side, and you do not wish them to be. You do not desire to be under obligation. You hope to pay for all this kindness; and I will tell you how you may, to the entire satisfaction of your parents, your pastor, your superintendent and your teachers. And that will be by striving during the coming year to follow the teaching of that one whose birth we celebrate in this Christmas festivity.

As Christ taught forgiveness to all, so you must carry no hatreds, no animosities into the coming year. As Christ taught love to all, so you must exercise the kindliest of feelings to every one. You should emulate the Divine Master in seeking to do good to every one with whom you come in contact; and particularly by bringing into this Sabbath-school, in the next year, every boy and girl whom you know may be benefited by its influence. As Christ taught charity to all, so you must lend a helping hand to those who need assistance; and as Jesus said, Honor thy father and mother, so may you be so obedient to parents, so watchful of their needs, as to make them glad that you are their children.

As your teachers and superintendent have labored in your behalf in the past year, so must you be very careful to remember their admonitions and practice their teaching. Doing that, your parents and your teachers will feel abundantly repaid for all they have done for you.

President Garfield said that he never stood in the presence of a boy without a feeling of veneration at the thought of what that boy might achieve in after-life.

As I stand in your presence to-night and look into the faces of these happy boys and girls—life all before you, with its privileges and opportunites—I can well understand the sentiment that moved him, as he studied the life of a child and thought of its future possibilities.

How soon this little girl—the very youngest—will develop through girl-hood to maidenhood. How very soon she will pass out from home—out into the great world, with confiding step and heart, leaning on the arm of a trusted companion, to assume the duties of wifehood, motherhood and womanhood.

And these boys—how soon they will take the helm to do our work. How the great world of travel, adventure, agriculture, invention, manufacture, teaching, legislation, and finance will absorb them.

And who of this audience will be the good, the true, the noble, and the successful in the coming time? May you so heed the teaching of this Sabbath-school that you will all be of that number.

May the year about to open in your Sabbath-school be one of real profit. May you each bring one new pupil to this school in the coming year, to enjoy these blessings with you. May we all meet here again next Christmas-time.

And now I wish you, in behalf of parents, friends and teachers, a most delightful, happy New-Year.

AT OLD SETTLERS' REUNION.

FELLOW CITIZENS—OLD NEIGHBORS AND PIONEERS IN CRAWFORD COUNTY:—Forty years ago, in company with Thomas Green, who died last year, I hunted for ducks on this very block of ground, worth to-day a large fortune of itself. At that time there were only seventeen white persons in the town, and a tribe of Winnebago Indians encamped at that time about three miles west of our village.

There were two frame-houses in the place. The rest were made of logs containing usually about three rooms. In a careful review of my own life and recollection of those who were here in those early days, I doubt if there ha-ever been a period in all our experience when we had a greater amount of happiness than fell to our lot in those pioneer days.

Everybody had work—plenty of it. Nobody feared being discharged on Saturday night because of over-production. Good health generally prevailed, the result of exercise, fresh air, hard work and sound sleep. There were no cliques in society, no aristocracy, no snobbery, no bankruptcies, no envy, and no distress because certain men were getting very rich while others were very poor.

There were no heart-burnings because one neighbor had a better furnished house than the others, and the women—they were women in those days—had no worry because they had nothing to wear.

Old Deacon Williams told me, on one occasion, when we were talking of the old times, that himself and family came from a handsomely furnished house in Springfield, Mass., to his log cabin, up near the big woods, and in all his experience he never saw such genuine hospitality, nor such a genial and happy time as his neighbors all had on their plain fare and the few opportunities around them. We lived right down to the barest necessaries in those days, and in doing that we learned that our real wants, in order to make us happy, are very few.

Forty winters, since some of us came here, have spread their white covering, and as many beautiful springs have brought the birds and flowers to us, returning every season to a vastly larger population than we had the year before. But I cannot tell you how, step by step, we have grown. I will leave that for others, who will give you the history of these forty years more in detail. Suffice it to say, the early settlers in this locality have been most fortunate in the peace and happiness which surrounded them in their pioneer days, in the wealth which has been showered upon them, and in the privileges which they enjoy to-day.

AT AN IMPROVEMENT MEETING.

Mr. President—While it is unquestionably true that the manufacturing of articles that may be sold abroad is a most prolific source of revenue and ultimate wealth to a town, it is equally important that a healthy atmosphere be about us, and that our homes, by their charming surroundings, be such as will cultivate those graces of nature which enable a people to make the right use of wealth when it is acquired. I have therefore this to suggest as a means of beautifying this city: That the inhabitants upon any street, for the space of one block, form an improvement society for that block, to do the following:

First—To take away all front fences from before dwellings.

Second—To set out a sufficiency of ornamental trees to suitably shade the streets.

Third—To secure a smooth stone or cement sidewalk, at least five feet in width.

Fourth—To grade the front lot from the house to the roadway, and cover the same with sod.

Fifth—To have the street swept as often as may be necessary to keep it clean, and the lawns all mown and kept in excellent order.

Sixth—To have all alleys and foul places carefully cleaned, and put into a condition such as will make the atmosphere in the immediate vicinity perfectly healthy.

The taking down of fences, setting trees, and putting grounds in order, will not be very expensive in the first place, and the keeping of them in fine condition afterwards can be done with comparatively small expense, the labor being performed by men who need this employment.

When these improvements which I have indicated are carried into effect generally, throughout the town, ours will be one of the healthiest and one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

TO THE PUPILS OF A PUBLIC SCHOOL.

My Dear Young Friends:—I have been listening with much pleasure to your recitations to-day, and with no less delight to the encouraging words of your teachers whenever you hesitated in your answers. For I remember when I was a boy, like some of you, I was always very sorry to have the teacher speak harshly to me, if I could not, at first thought, answer his question correctly.

Boys and girls, you are very much like men and women in your likes and dislikes, and you feel, quite as keenly as I should, any harsh or unjust word or action on the part of your instructor. In old times, years before you were born, we had no such noble schools as you have. We had but few books, and I think, now, they could not have been as attractive and interesting to study as those I see lying upon your desks. We used to deem them very dull; and then, too, our teachers were not so wise and skillful in imparting instruction as yours are in the public schools to-day. They were often young men attending college, and teaching to earn money to pay for their education; sometimes they were cross to us and at others they were very unjust in punishing us for not learning faster than we did. Our school-houses were also very inconvenient places, and often really uncomfortable for teachers and pupils.

But now all this has been changed and the school-houses and books and teachers are all of a better class, so that learning is made pleasant and is much more easily gained. In my school days, if a boy could read, write and cipher through the "rule of three," it was quite as much as he had reason to expect from the district school. Perhaps he could not spell half the words in the spelling-book aright, nor write a ten-line letter without making fifty mistakes, nor cipher a sum in compound addition correctly. But now you may easily master all these things and many more and better ones, and if you pay proper attention to the lessons you receive, you can go into the high-school, and there gain a sensible, practical education that will either fit you for the business of life, or prepare you to take a higher course in college.

You young people should recollect, that in a few years you will be on the stage of action, doing the work of men and women. Will you be successful? That will depend upon what you know. And what you know then will largely depend upon what you learn in this school. The years are going by very quickly and you will be obliged to put your knowledge to the test very soon.

I say this because some young people do not know the value of school. They look upon the school-yard and the school-room as one vast play-ground, and they never wake up to a sense of what they have lost until it is too late.

Have a mark, young people; aim for it, and you will rise vastly higher than you will if you have no purpose in life. Your teachers are here to assist you. They are not here to punish. They do not want to spend their time in governing you. They desire to aid in the securing of that education which shall fit you to do your work nobly in life.

It is pleasant to see the opportunities you possess. It is very satisfactory to see the drill, the system, and methods pursued in your studies and recitations; and I doubt not it will be equally satisfactory to see your success in after-years, the result of your attending this school.

RESPONSE TO THE TOAST, "THE LADIES."

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—With all my heart I respond to this toast. I assure you it inspires me like one of Miss Braddon's delightful love-stories. The ladies! Yes, I admire them greatly in the aggregate; I honor them in the abstract, and some of them I absolutely love!

"Why should I fear to own to all
That beauty does my heart enthrall?"

Gentlemen, in proposing this toast you honor your manhood and every daughter of Eve; in responding to it I can only echo the sentiment of Sir Walter Scott:

"O woman, in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please,
And variable as the shade
By the light quivering aspen made;
When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou!"

And speaking of angels, what a delightful combination some genius has made in writing "mother, home and heaven!"

My mother! Sacredly to her honored gray hairs I answer to this toast

My sister, my earliest playmate, beloved guide and helper in my infantile pilgrimage.

My sweetheart! What words can paint her beauty and her goodness? I wish her happiness, sleeping or waking!

My friend! Truest of the true, faithful among the many that are untrue always bright, tractable, hopeful and wise—I respond for her!

My cousin! poor child, she was older than I, but we loved each other in our childhood, and when she married unfortunately, and died of a broken heart, she left me only the memory of her beautiful character to cherish forever.

My wife—that is to be!

"She's all my fancy painted her,
She's lovely—she's divine!"

But the rest of that verse does not apply in my case, for she has surely promised to be mine! I hope for her good health and happiness!

Did I hear somebody whispering near me "How about mother-in-law?" Gentlemen, excuse me if I stand up squarely before you, and defend that much-maligned relative. Fortunately I know whom she will be, and I tell you that should my wife and I, in the far future, marry our daughter (that is to be) to some heartless, dissipated fellow, I hope that he may find his mother-in-law a terror to his soul, and I'll back her up in it, you may believe. I tell you sons-in-law determine the mother-in-law question every time! Show me a man who respects himself and his wife as he ought, and proves himself an honorable gentleman on all occasions, and his mother-in-law will love him better, if possible, than his wife ever did.

RESPONSE TO THE TOAST, "OUR HOST AND HOSTESS."

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I think you will all agree with me when I refer to this occasion as one of those bright oases in ordinary life which release us from business cares and afford us opportunity to unbend and mingle in cheerful recreation with our esteemed friends. I am sure that we all need a stimulus of this sort after a season of drudgery at the desk or counter, in order to clear away the dust and cobwebs from our brains, to revive our social natures, and to develop our finer sentiments and feelings of humanity. When I look around this generous board and see so many friendly faces, my heart warms, and there comes bubbling up the desire that these happy reunions might occur more frequently. But while I rejoice with you that the hour has been a triumph of social enjoyment, we should not be forgetful of those to whose thoughtful care and hospitality we are indebted for it. Certainly we can, each one of us, appreciate the bounty and good taste that have provided this delightful banquet, and I, therefore, have no hesitation in asking you to pledge to them our warmest regards while I propose the healths of our excellent host and hostess.

THE HOST'S REPLY.

Friends:—It would ill become me to sit still with that hearty sentiment ringing in our ears and nestling in our hearts, and, in my own name and that of my wife, I rise to thank you, sincerely and earnestly for your very kind expressions of esteem and friendship for us. True gratitude does not require to be clothed in many words. Language is frequently inadequate, in such cases, to convey more than a mere and remote idea of the feelings that are prompted by such very gratifying and generous sentiments as you have so unanimously uttered. In all sincerity and earnestness, as your friends, we hope for your individual prosperity in all the relations of life and business, trusting that in the early future we may have the pleasure of again meeting you, under as agreeable circumstances, to renew our mutual and harmonious enjoyment.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS..

Mr. President and Fellow-Students:—It has developed upon me, as the senior member of the class of 191-. to give expression to a few thoughts appropriate to this occasion I do so with a keen appreciation of the relations we have so long sustained with each other, the faculty of this college, and the world of affairs into which we are about to enter, and with which we are henceforth to mingle, not knowing what is before us, but hoping in the ardor of young manhood for the best.

Fellow students, we have been companions for four years—four years, to some of us, of diligent application to our studies; four years of light and shade to all of us; four years of social fellowship and pleasant recreation; four years of mental and physical improvement. We have sympathized with each other in trouble and sorrows; have lightened each other's hearts in times of sadness, and have enjoyed college-life in each other's society, I will venture to say, as well as any other class that ever graduated from these classic halls. We go hence with our diplomas, which the world looks upon as the keys that are to unlock the doors of science, art, literature, theology, physic and merchandise for us, and open the avenues of wealth and honor to us. We go hence, as we are, to the battle of life. What success we shall have, what victories we may win, the future alone can tell.

But we go forth with strong hope and abiding faith that all will be well with us if we perform our duty faithfully in whatever calling or sphere fate may assign us.

Where will fate or fortune place us in the great sea of the future? I see in imagination this class all scattered, many the heads of families, engaged in the peaceful pursuits of agriculture and trade; others on the rough sea of political life, some of whom will doubtless reap honor in State and National affairs, bestowing benefit upon their fellow-men, while they hold high and responsible positions in official life.

But as we go forth, each to fulfill his destiny, let us forget all our boyish prejudices, if any we have, against each other, and through our lives be helpful friends to each other as opportunities may offer. For myself, and I think I speak for all, these college friendships are too sacred to be lightly broken or forgotten, and in our farewells and final pressure of our hands together, let us renew the bonds which our fellowship in our Alma Mater has woven.

Members of the Faculty—we go hence with the profoundest esteem for the wisdom, forbearance and uniform justice and kindness that you have ever manifested toward us within these walls. We have been often hasty, heedless of your feelings and our own best interests, and have at times caused you great annoyance by our boyish follies: but in all these things you have proven yourselves our true friends and mentors and in our hearts we have cherished no malevolence, no hatred toward you. In whatever we have given you offense we ask your forgiveness, and carry away with us a heartfelt gratitude for all the many favors we have received at your hands.

Fellow students of the Freshmen, Sophomore and Junior classes, I take a retrospective view, as I look into your youthful faces, and I see this graduating class as it was four years ago, a handful of inexperienced, puzzled freshmen, the sport of the sophomores, and unheeded or plagued by the seniors. What we felt and endured then, half-discouraged by our outward circumstances and our inward fears, you now feel and endure; but look up, boys, look up! The freshmen will soon be sophomores, and the sophomores juniors: and the troubles of the present will fade away in the future like a morning dream. On your part you have youth, good intellects and capable teachers, and if you fail—and I do not believe you will—you will have only your want of attention to study to blame for it. The four years' course is not the bugbear that you fear it is, and its difficulties will dissolve before the energy and application that you (I am sure) are now determined to exercise. We leave you here to so maintain the honor of this institution that you may depart from it with its blessing.

The hour of parting draws nigh. In spite of hope and faith in the future, there is a tinge of sadness in the present, which I, for one, do not fear to cherish and confess, for it testifies to the genuineness of our human sympathy and heartfelt friendship.

PRESENTING DIPLOMAS AT SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

We are met together here to-day, at the close of this school year, to confer a visible token upon certain young men and young women in recognition of the diligence and success with which they have applied themselves to their studies during the time that they have been in attendance at this school

The diplomas, which it is my privilege and pleasure to award as President of the School Board, have been earned by faithful work no less than by natural talent, and each scroll that will be received by the candidates for this honor may be regarded as documentary evidence that its possessor has made a serious and successful effort to improve his natural qualities and fit himself for the duties of life and the responsibilities of American citizenship.

On this happy day we should not forget the serious meaning of our system of education. It is, I believe, thoroughly practical, and the knowledge acquired by our scholars is such as lies at the foundation of the many various activities in which our young men and young women will find their life work. It is a fact of which every American citizen may well feel proud that our people in this country have a higher average of intelligence than that of any people in any other part of the world. Thoughtful men have attributed this largely to our school system. James Russell Lowell, the celebrated author and former Ambassador to England, said:

> "It was in making education not only common to all, but in some sense compulsory on all, that the destiny of the free republics of America was practically settled."

As the name of each graduate is announced I will present this diploma, which reads as follows: (Here read the wording of the diploma.)

And now, as the representative of the body in whose hands the community has placed the care of starting into the world you creditable young men and young women, of whom we are justly proud, I bestow these certificates with our united good wishes, and trust that you will continue to grow in wisdom and character to take your rightful places among the illustrious millions of good American citizens.

(As the name of each candidate is announced the speaker hands the diploma.)

OUR WIVES.

(Speech of Henry Watterson of Kentucky on the anniversary of General W. T. Sherman's birthday at Washington, D. C., February 8, 1883).

GENTLEMEN:—When one undertakes to respond to such a sentiment as you do me the honor to assign me, he knows in advance that he is put, as it were, upon his good behavior, I recognize the justice of this and accepted the responsibility with the charge; though I may say that if General Sherman's wife resembles mine—and I very much suspect she does—he has a sympathy for me at the present moment. Once upon a festal occasion, a little late, quite after the hour when Cinderella was bidden by her godmother to go to bed, I happened to extol the graces and virtues of the newly wedded wife of a friend of mine, and finally, as a knockdown argument, I compared her to my own wife "In this case," said he, dryly, "you'll catch it when you get home." It is a peculiarity they all have; not a ray of humor where the husband is concerned; to the best of them and to the last he must be and must continue to be —a hero!

Now, I do not wish you to believe, nor to think that I myself believe that all women make heroes of their husbands. Women are logical in nothing. They naturally hate mathematics. So, they would have their husbands be heroes only to the rest of the world There is a charming picture by John Leech, the English satirist, which depicts Jones, who never looked askance at a woman in his life, sitting demurely at the table, stuck with his nose on his plate, and Mrs. Jones opposite, redundant, to a degree, observing with gratified severity, "Now, Mr. Jones, don't let me see you ogling those Smith girls again!" She, too, was like the rest—the good ones, I mean—seeing the world through her husband, no happiness but his comfort, no vanity but his glory; sacrificing herself to his wants, and where he proves inadequate putting her imagination out to service and bringing home a basket of flowers to deck his brow. Of our sweethearts the humorist hath it—

> "Where are the Marys and Anns and Elizas, > Lovely and loving of yore?
> Look in the columns of old 'Advertisers,' > Married and dead by the score."

But "Our Wives." We don't have far to look to find them, sometimes. I am told, you army gentlemen have been known to find them turning unexpectedly up along the ranges of the Rocky Mountains, and making their presence felt even as far as the halls of the Montezumas; yet how should we get on without them? Rob mankind of his wife and time could never become a grandfather. Strange as you may think it, our wives are, in a sense, responsible for our children; and I ask you seriously how could the world get on if it had no children? It might get on for a while, I do admit; but I challenge the boldest among you to say how long it could get on without "our wives." It would not only give out of children; in a little—a very little—while it would have no mother-in-law, nor sister-in-law, nor brother-in-law, nor any or those acquired relatives whom it has learned to love, and who have contributed so largely to its stock of harmless pleasure.

But as this is not exactly a tariff discussion, though a duty, I drop statistics let me ask you what would become of the revenues of man if it were not for "our wives?" We should have no milliners but for "our wives." But for "our wives" those makers of happiness and furbelows, those fabricators of smiles and frills, those gentle beings who bias and scallop and do their sacking at both ends of the bill, and sometimes in the middle, would be compelled to shut up shop, retire from business, and return to the good old city of Mantau, whence they came The world would grow too rich; albeit, on this promise I do not propose to construct an argument in favor of more wives. One wife is enough, two is too many, and more than two are an abomination everywhere, except in Utah and the halls of our national legislature.

I beg you to forgive me. I do not speak in banter. It has been said that a good woman, fitly mated, grows doubly good; but how often have we seen a bad man mated to a good woman turned into a good man? Why, I myself, was not wholly good till I married my wife; and, if the eminent soldier and gentleman in whose honor we are here—and may he be among us many and many another anniversary, yet always sixty-three—if he should tell the story of his life, I am sure he would say that its darkest hours were cherished, its brighest illuminated by the fair lady of a noble race, who stepped from the highest social eminence to place her hand in that of an obscure young subaltern of the line. The world had not become acquainted with him, but with the prophetic instinct of a true woman she discovered, as she has since developed, the mine. So it is with all "our wives." Whatever there is good in us they bring it out; wherefor may they be forever honored in the myriad of hearts they come to lighten and to bless.

BUSINESS FORMS AND LAWS.

WHAT MONEY IS.

Money is defined as "that which passes freely from hand to hand throughout the community in final discharge of debts and full payment for commodities, being accepted equally without reference to the character or credit of the person who offers it and without the intention of the person who receives it to consume it or enjoy it or apply it to any other use than in turn to tender it to others in discharge of debts or payment for commodities." Currency is the name given to the legal medium of exchange in every country.

Various articles have passed current as money in various communities at different times, but the standard of monetary value of the civilized nations of the world is a fixed amount of gold or of silver, which, taken together, is called bullion.

In the United States the dollar is the unit of value, and is equal to 23.22 grains of pure gold. Therefore, when we say that an article is worth so many dollars we mean it is worth so many times as much as 23.22 grains of pure gold.

The gold coins of the United States actually contain the gold in the proportion of 900 parts gold and 100 parts alloy, and are the only form of money actually worth its face value as a commodity; therefore gold is the only money that will be accepted in a foreign country at par. The gold coins of the United States are the 20-dollar piece or double eagle, the 10-dollar piece or eagle, the 5-dollar piece or half eagle, the 3-dollar piece, the 2½-dollar piece or quarter eagle, and the gold dollar, which has not been coined since 1890.

The silver dollar weighs 412½ grains, of which 371¼ grains is pure silver and 41.25 grains alloy. This amount of pure silver was at one time equal in value with 23.22 grains of pure gold. Of late years it has been much cheaper, and its relative value to gold is determined by commercial conditions.

The half dollar, quarter dollar and dime, as well as the 5-cent nickel and the copper cent, contain still smaller proportions of silver, and are intended only for circulation in this country as representatives of the fractional parts of a dollar. They are legal tender for debts not exceeding five dollars in amount.

The standard of value are the gold coins, which stand upon their own merits as actually worth what they represent on their face, All other coins only represent their face value, being accepted throughout the land because they are by law exchangeable for the amounts for which they stand.

PAPER MONEY.

There is another medium of exchange not having any value in itself, but representing the credit of the government. It is, in fact, a form of "promise to pay," and for that reason it is often called "fiat money" or "paper money." Paper money is largely in use in this country, and is represented by four different kinds. The first and second are called respectively Gold Certificates and Silver Certificates. These are issued by the treasury, and represent on their face the number of gold or silver dollars held in the treasury of the United States payable on demand to bearer. These certificates are popular on account of their convenience, and are always worth par. The third kind is the treasury note or greenback, which is a promise to pay the bearer on demand (therefore a demand note) without interest. This was called into existence during the Civil War, and for a time was not worth par in gold. Now it is worth par, as the credit of the government insures their payment; but the volume is diminishing as none have been issued since 1800.

The fourth class is the National Bank note, issued by banks holding a charter from the United States, whose circulation is secured by United States bonds deposited with the Treasurer of the United States. In this class may be included the notes issued by the Federal Reserve Banks.

Gold certificates are issued in denominations of $10 and upwards; silver certificates in $1, $2, $5, $10 and upwards to $100; treasury notes in $1, $2, $5, $10, etc., to $1,000; national bank notes in $5, $10, $20, etc., to $1,000.

BANKS AND BANKING.

Banks, both national and private, offer another means of exchange. Any one having money deposited in a bank to his credit may give to a third party an order on the bank for any number of dollars and cents not exceeding the full amount of his credit. These orders on the banks are called Bank Checks. They differ from paper money, as their acceptance depends upon the credit of the one who draws (or signs) the check. It is usually made payable "to the order of" some one.

The use of checks adds to the circulating medium, and is a benefit to the community at large. It leaves actual money for minor transactions. They are in far more extensive use than any other form of money order. Checks often pass from hand to hand as money before they reach the bank, and then are seldom cashed—usually deposited. Over a hundred million dollars of checks daily in New York alone are not cashed at the paying teller's window, but pass in "exchanges" through the Clearing House, which is an association of the banks of a large city for the purpose of conveniently and quickly transferring checks they hold for collection.

UTILITY OF BANK ACCOUNTS.

Some advantages of keeping an account at bank are:

(1) The bank accepts money on deposit subject to check; (2) it lends money on approved security; (3) it facilitates the sending of money from place to place by allowing the deposits to be drawn out on an order called a check; (4) it provides a safe place to keep valuables and securities; (5) it is very helpful in making collections, such as notes, checks, drafts and trade acceptances; (6) it advises its patrons concerning the advisability of making investments.

HOW TO OPEN A BANK ACCOUNT.

When a patron desires to open an account with a bank, he will usually be required to obtain an introduction to the officer of the bank by some one known to them. After this identification he will be requested to write his name on a signature card in the same way he expects to sign the orders or checks when he desires the bank to deduct money from his account. The object of having this signature on file in the bank is to identify the signature on the check with the one on the card. A plain, neat signature is most difficult to imitate.

The items of the deposit and the amount are entered on a deposit ticket and handed to the receiving teller of the bank, who will enter the amount in a bank book which will be given to the depositor. This bank book serves as a receipt to show the amount you have deposited in the bank.

In listing checks the common practice is to write the name of the local bank on which the check was drawn in the space on the left of the money column on a line with the amount of the check. Each check should be listed separately. If the bank on which the check is drawn is an out-of-town one the name of the city or town should be written instead of the name of the bank.

This practice has been changed to some extent by the numerical system introduced by the Federal Reserve Banks. The United States is divided into twelve districts and each district has located in it a bank which is known as a Federal Reserve Bank. Each reserve bank is assigned a serial number. Other banks located in one of these districts may become members of the Federal Reserve System. Each one of the member banks also will be assigned a serial number. If the member bank is located in one of the twelve cities where a Federal Reserve Bank has been established, the member bank will take as its initial number the one assigned to the Federal Reserve Bank of that city. For instance, the Federal Reserve Bank No. 3 is located in Philadelphia, Pa. Any other member bank located in Philadelphia will have a number assigned to it as follows: 3–56. The figure 3 means that it is located in Philadelphia and it is number 56.

Each state also has an assigned number. If a member bank is located outside of the city in which the Federal Reserve Bank is located the initial number will be the same as assigned to that state. For instance, a member bank located in Reading may have such a number as 60–73. These numbers will be printed on the check of a member bank and should be used in place of the name of the bank or city when listing checks on the deposit ticket.

CHECKS.

A Check is a written demand, which is addressed to a bank by a person who has money deposited therein for the payment of a part or the whole of his money to a third party.

Most business men number their checks in the order they are issued. The number is found in one of the corners which is not occupied by the value of the check written in figures.

HOW TO DRAW A CHECK.

Checks are principally of two kinds: Negotiable and Non-negotiable.

A Negotiable Check is one that may be transferred from one person to another, and a Non-negotiable Check is one that cannot be so transferred.

In drawing a negotiable check the order may be in one of the following forms: Pay to Bearer; Pay to the order of So-and-so; Pay to So-and-so or order. The first makes the money payable to any one that may present the check. The second or third makes the money payable to any person to whom the payee may order it paid.

When the word Bearer is used, the check is negotiable as it stands; but when the word order is used, the payee can neither collect the money himself nor transfer the check to another without writing his name upon the back. This is called indorsing the check. When the payee writes his name only, he is said to indorse the check in blank. By this indorsement he makes the money payable to bearer and the check is still negotiable. When the payee wishes the money paid to a particular person only, he writes on the back "Pay to the order of" So-and-so, and signs his name beneath. With such an indorsement the check is no longer negotiable until signed by the indorsee. If the indorsee wishes to transfer the check to another he either indorses the check in blank, when it again becomes negotiable, or repeats the indorsement to a particular person, and signs his own name beneath. This may be repeated by a third person, and so on. The Holder is the person who is in legal possession of a check.

HOW TO INDORSE CHECKS.

For indorsement, first turn the check so as to bring the left end to the top, and then turn it face downwards and write the indorsement near the top Each successive indorsement should be written under its predeccssor.

Checks are usually bound in books. At the left of each check so bound, and on the same piece of paper is a ruled form for a complete description of the check. Between the check and this ruled form there is a line of perforations by means of which the check can be torn off for use. The paper that remains behind is called the stub.

Before depositing the checks they must first be indorsed by the person who is receiving credit for the money. The customary form of indorsement to write or stamp across the back of the check and about one inch from the top:

FOR DEPOSIT TO CREDIT OF Herbert Smith
or
FOR DEPOSIT ONLY IN HANOVER NATIONAL BANK FOR CREDIT OF
Herbert Smith

The left end of the face of the check is the top of the back. Any person named for the purpose may sign an indorsement for deposit. Checks thus indorsed can only be deposited, and should they be lost on the way to the bank the finder cannot use them, because as stated the checks are to be deposited, and the bank is not authorized to pay them to any one.

If the holder receives a check in which his name is incorrectly written, he must first indorse the name as it is written and under that write his own name correctly. When the deposit slip has been made out, it is well to keep a copy upon the stub of the check book. The checks, money, deposit slip and pass book are then taken to the receiving teller, who examines the deposit slip to see that it is correct, and enters the amount in the pass book. This entry s his receipt for the amount deposited.

It is of the highest importance that the depositor keep his check book correctly and punctually written up. It is his guide to his bank account and he should be able to tell at once exactly how much money he has in bank at any given time.

RECONCILIATION OF BANK STATEMENT.

The modern bank prepares and sends to its depositors at the end of each month a statement showing the amount of the previous balance, deposits received and checks paid during the month. When this statement is received the depositor should compare the stubs in his check book with the checks listed as paid. If all the checks have been paid the balance should be the same. The statement may show a larger balance than the check book on a certain date. This will be the case if some of the checks which have been written and deducted from the check book have not yet been presented and paid by the bank. In order to prove the bank's statement, the sum of all checks which have not been paid by the bank should be deducted from the balance shown on the bank's statement, and this should equal the balance on the stub of the check book.

If the bank does not send monthly statements, the pass book should be left at the bank for settlement at intervals.

CERTIFIED CHECKS.

In many transactions, involving the transfer of a large amount of valuable property for cash, an ordinary check is not satisfactory to the person who is parting with his property, for he is not sure that his check will be honored when presented, however good the standing of the drawer may be. Therefore the check may be presented to the paying teller or cashier of the bank on which the check has been drawn, who, after finding that the amount is still to drawer's credit, writes or stamps across its face the words "Good when properly indorsed," or "certified," and signs his name. The amount of the check is at once charged to drawer's account, and is the same as cash withdrawn. The certification of checks is largely practiced in large business centers, as in Wall Street, New York, where the daily sales of stocks and bonds run up into the millions, and failures caused by fluctuation in prices often come with startling rapidity. A check which may be good to-day, to-morrow may be worthless.

When a check has been lost in the mails or otherwise, stolen, or given in mistake, the payment of the same may be stopped by the drawer at any time before it is presented at bank. Parties holding such a check honestly, and for value given, may have recourse to law for collection of same.

TRADE ACCEPTANCES.

A trade acceptance must rise out of an actual commercial transaction. It must comply with most of the requirements of negotiable paper. It must possess a definite maturity. It must be an unconditional promise to pay at maturity. It must be signed by the party who has made the purchase of merchandise. All of the above requirements tend toward making the paper self-liquidating. The trade acceptance is given at the time the transaction is made, and carries with it no imputation of inability to pay. When a person sells a bill of merchandise to another he may send with the bill a trade acceptance which the buyer will accept and return. The person selling the merchandise may take the trade acceptance to his bank and discount it and reinvest the money at once. The trade acceptance has a definite specified period of time. The principal thought behind the trade acceptance is to make the financing of transactions easier for all concerned. It tends to make the credit of the country more mobile.

DRAFTS AND BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

A draft, or bill of exchange, is, in fact, a letter written by one person to another living in a different place, requesting him to pay a sum of money to the order of the drawer or to a third person. Commercial usage recognizes particular forms for writing these drafts.

There are two kinds of bills of exchange, Domestic and Foreign.

Domestic Bills of Exchange are payable in the same country in which they are drawn, and are commonly called Drafts.

Foreign Bills of Exchange are payable in another country from that in which they are drawn, and are called Foreign Drafts.

The person who signs a bill of exchange (or draft) is called the Drawer or Maker; the one to whom it is addressed, the Drawee; the one to whom it is made payable, the Payee; and the person who is in legal possession of it, the Holder.

Bills of exchange, like notes and checks, are either negotiable or non-negotiable, according as they are payable to the order of a person or simply to the person himself. The former are the more common.

A Time Draft is one made payable a certain specified length of time after sight or after date.

Foreign bills of exchange are usually made in sets of three, which are alike in all respects except their designations of first, second, and third. The three bills are usually sent by different mails, and whichever arrives first is used. The others are then worthless. These bills differ from ordinary drafts, by the insertion in each, of the condition that it is to be paid if the other two of the set are unpaid.

Drafts are sent through banks, and not through the mails, and are used to avoid the risk, inconvenience, and expense of sending actual money from one place to another. The principal object for which it is used is to collect money due from the drawee to the drawer. For instance, if Jones, of Chicago, owes Smith, of Philadelphia, $750, Smith may draw on Jones for that amount. He will deposit the draft properly drawn with his own bank in Philadelphia, which will forward it to the bank with which Jones does business in Chicago, and which is called its correspondent. The draft when received in Chicago is presented to Jones at his place of business, who pays it by check or cash, or stamps or writes across its face

ACCEPTED
PAYABLE AT FIRST NATIONAL BANK.
JOHN JONES.

Or, he may write write across the face simply "Accepted" and his name. The draft will then be paid at Jones' office when it falls due.

The draft in the former case becomes a check on Jones' account at the First National Bank when it is charged against his account. The bank in Chicago then credits and advises the bank in Philadelphia, which in turn credits Smith.

By courtesy Smith, when making the draft upon Jones, advises him at once of the fact, that he may be prepared to pay it.

If not paid, the draft is protested—that is, a formal statement of the fact of presentation is made by a notary and served upon drawer and all who have indorsed their names to the draft.

But if the drawer does not wish to incur the expense of protest fees, or to injure the credit of the debtor, there may be pinned to the draft a piece of paper with the words "No protest" upon it. This is to notify the bank presenting the draft that the drawer does not wish it protested if not paid. It is important that this slip of paper be detached before the draft is presented or else the draft would lose its "force."

A check is practically a sight draft upon a bank; but there is a marked difference between a "check" and a "draft." For example. The form and wording are different; a check is drawn upon a bank or banker with whom funds have been deposited; a draft is drawn upon an individual or business house.

Checks are used for paying money to creditors; drafts are used as a means of collecting moneys due to the one drawing.

Checks, when properly drawn and presented, must be paid by the bank if it has funds belonging to the drawer.

The party drawn upon is under no obligation to honor a draft, if for any reason he choses not to do so.

DUE BILLS.

A Due Bill is a formal written acknowledgment that a certain amount is due.

It should in capitalization, punctuation, and arrangement of parts, follow the same rules as are followed for business letters.

Due bills are often given in settling accounts, when it is not convenient to make immediate payment.

Unlike promissory notes, due bills cannot properly be made payable to order. They are therefore non-negotiable.

The amount represented by a due bill should be expressed twice, as in a receipt, check, or note—once in writing, and once in figures.

PROMISSORY NOTES.

A promissory note is a written promise to pay a specified sum of money at a designated time, both of which are stated in the body of the note.

The holder is the person who is in lawful possession of a note, whether he is the original payee or has received the note by indorsement.

Promissory notes are divided, in common usage, into three principal kinds: Individual Notes, Joint Notes, Joint-and-several Notes. Any of these notes may be either negotiable or non-negotiable.

An Individual Note is one signed by a single person.

A Joint Note is one signed by two or more persons who are together responsible for its payment, share and share alike.

A Joint-and-several Note is one signed by two or more persons, all of whom together, or any one of whom separately may be held for the whole amount. The words, "We jointly and severally promise," which are found in this note, are equivalent to "We together and separately promise." Accordingly, when such a note matures, if all the signers are able to pay, they contribute share and share alike; while if one or more cannot pay, the whole amount is paid by the remaining one or more.

A note is made negotiable, that is salable, by making it payable to a person, or his order, or to his assigns, or to bearer, or to the cashier of a bank or incorporated company. A note so drawn may be negotiated, or used in payment to another person by the holder; but he must indorse his name on the back of the note. Should the drawer of the note fail to pay it, the holder looks to the person or persons who indorsed it for payment.

A note made payable at a bank and held there for payment until the usual hour for closing, need not be presented to the drawer in person to bind the indorser. It may be protested as in the case of drafts, immediately upon the close of bank-hours. Payment must be immediately demanded of the indorser if he resides in the same place; if he is a non-resident he must be notified at once by letter.

DISCOUNTING NOTE AT BANK.

When notes are offered at bank they are passed upon by its officers or directors, or both, to satisfy themselves that the maker and indorsers are good for payment. If accepted the bank charges interest or discount at an agreed upon rate reckoned upon the face of the note for the time for which the note is to run from the day it is discounted. For instance a note for $500 drawn and dated April 1,191-, payable in 3 months, would be due and payable July 1st or 4th. If offered at bank for discount on May 1, 191–, the bank would reckon the interest from May 1st to July 1st. It is to be noted that the bank takes its interest in advance and pays to holder of note the proceeds which is the face value less the bank interest or discount. To compute the value of a note which reads "with interest," you add to the face value the interest which will be due at the maturity of note. Upon this value the bank reckons its discount.

INDORSEMENTS, A SUMMARY.

Indorsements are entries written on the back of any paper, whether checks, notes or drafts. They show either a transfer of title, a giving of security, or a receipt for a payment applying on the contract indorsed.

When a paper is written payable to the order of John Smith, and he wishes to tranfer his title to Henry Jones, he writes on the back of the paper an order for its payment to Jones.

For the convenience of bank-tellers and others who have large numbers of such indorsed papers to handle daily, it is well to write the indorsement across the left end of the paper.

On negotiable papers that are likely to have several indorsements, care should be taken to write the indorsements as close together as is convenient. If the back of the paper should be covered with indorsements, other indorsements can be written on blank paper attached to the original. We give here, plainly marked, the various forms of indorsements:

1 (Transfer or Title.) Pay to the order of Henry Jones. JOHN SMITH.	2 (Without Recourse.) Pay to Henry Jones, or order, without recourse. JOHN SMITH.	3 (In Blank.) JOHN SMITH.	4 (Blank—Without Recourse.) Without recourse. JOHN SMITH.	5 (For Money Paid.) Oct. 4, 1900, Received on within note Fifty ($50) Dollars.	6 (For Collection.) Pay to the order of the Commercial National Bank of Lansing, Mich., for collection. JOHN SMITH.	7 (Protest Waived.) Notice and protest waived. JOHN SMITH.

No. 1 is the more common and safest form. It transfers the ownership from Smith to Jones, and makes Smith responsible to Jones in case the maker or payer of the paper fails to pay it.

No. 2 transfers ownership, but relieves Smith from any responsibility if the paper is not paid when due. Only under special circumstances is this used.

No. 3 transfers the ownership to any party who may hold the paper, making it in effect payable to the bearer. Such paper should not fall in hands of strangers.

No. 4 transfers the ownership as in No. 3, except that it relieves Smith from further responsibility.

No. 5 is a receipt for money paid to apply on the promise indorsed. Such indorsements need no signature as it might have the effect of a receipt in full.

No. 6 does not transfer the ownership of the paper, but merely gives authority to collect the paper as Smith's agent and to place the amount collected to his account.

No. 7 relieves bank of responsibility of serving notice and protest.

RECEIPTS.

A Receipt is a written acknowledgment, signed by the receiver and delivered to the giver, showing that certain property (money or goods, or both) has been received.

THE LAW OF NOTES AND CHECKS.

Negotiable instruments, the common forms of which are promissory notes, checks, or other bills of exchange, while having the same general requisites as other contracts, have certain distinct features. The purpose of the law is to facilitate as much as possible their free passing from hand to hand like currency. The assignment of an ordinary contract leaves the assignee in no different position for enforcing his rights than that of his assignor, but one who takes a negotiable instrument from a prior holder, without knowledge of any defenses to it, before its maturity, and gives value for it, holds it free of any defenses which might have been set up against his predecessors, except those defects that were inherent in the instrument itself.

To be negotiable an instrument must be in writing and signed by the maker (of a note) or drawer (of a bill or check).

It must contain an unconditional promise or order to pay a sum certain in money. Must be payable on demand, or at a fixed future time. Must be payable to order or to bearer. In a bill of exchange (check) the party directed to pay must be reasonably certain. Every negotiable instrument is presumed to have been issued for a valuable consideration, and want of consideration in the creation of the instrument is not a defense against a bona-fide holder.

An instrument is negotiated, that is completely transferred, so as to vest title in the purchaser, if payable to bearer, or indorsed simply with the name of the last holder, by mere delivery, if payable to order by the indorsement of the party to whom it is payable and delivery. One who transfers an instrument by indorsement warrants to every subsequent holder that the instrument is genuine, that he has title to it, and that if not paid by the party primarily liable at maturity, he will pay it upon receiving due notice of non-payment.

To hold an indorser liable the holder upon its non-payment at maturity must give prompt notice of such non-payment to the indorser and that the holder looks to the indorser for payment. Such notice should be sent within twenty-four hours.

When an indorser is thus compelled to pay he may hold prior parties through whom he received the instrument liable to him by sending them prompt notice of non-payment upon receiving such notice from the holder.

One who transfers a negotiable instrument by delivery, without indorsing it, simply warrants that the instrument is genuine, that he has title to it, and knows of no defence to it, but does not agree to pay it if unpaid at maturity.

The maker of a note is liable to pay it if unpaid at maturity without any notice from the holder or indorser.

Notice to one of several partners is sufficient notice to all.

When a check is certified by a bank the bank becomes primarily liable to pay it without notice of its non-payment, and when the holder of a check thus obtains its certification by the bank, the drawer of the check and previous indorsers are released from liability, and the holder looks to the bank for payment.

A bona-fide holder of a negotiable instrument, that is, a party who takes an instrument regular on its face, before its maturity, pays value for it and has no knowledge of any defenses to it, is entitled to hold the party primarily liable responsible for its payment, despite any defenses he may have against the party to whom he gave it, except such as rendered the instrument void in its inception. Thus, if the maker of a note received no value for it, or was induced to issue it through fraud or imposition, they do not defeat the right of a bona-fide holder to compel its payment from him.

Loss of excess of interest in Connecticut, Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire (three times), Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Vermont, and West Virginia. Loss of principal and interest in Rhode Island, also fine or imprisonment. In New Mexico, fine and forfeiture of double amount collected.

BUSINESS LAWS IN DAILY USE.

The following compilation of business law contains the essence of a large amount of legal verbiage:

Ignorance of the law excuses no one.

The law compels no one to do impossibilities.

A contract made with a lunatic is void.

It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

Signatures made with a lead-pencil are good in law.

If a note is lost or stolen, it does not release the maker; he must pay it if the consideration for which it was given and the amount can be proven.

Notes bear interest only when so stated.

Principals are responsible for the acts of their agents.

Each individual in a partnership is responsible for the whole amount of the debts of the firm, except in cases of special partnership.

An agreement without consideration is void.

A note made on Sunday is void.

Contracts made on Sunday cannot be enforced.

A note by a minor is void.

A contract made with a minor is void.

A note obtained by fraud, or from a person in a state of intoxication, cannot be collected.

A receipt for money is not always conclusive.

The acts of one partner bind all the rest.

The maker of an "accommodation" bill or note (one for which he has received no consideration, having lent his name or credit for the accommodation of the holder) is not bound to the person accommodated, but is bound to all other parties precisely as if there was a good consideration.

Checks or drafts must be presented for payment without unreasonable delay.

If the drawee of a check or draft has changed his residence, the holder must use due or reasonable diligence to find him.

If one who holds a check, as payee or otherwise, transfers it to another, he has a right to insist that the check be presented that day, or, at farthest, on the day following.

A note indorsed in blank (the name of the indorser only written) is transferable by delivery, the same as if made payable to bearer.

If the time of payment of a note is not inserted, it is held payable on demand.

An indorsee has a right of action against all whose names were on the bill when he received it.

If the letter containing a protest of non-payment be put into the post-office, any miscarriage does not affect the party giving notice

If two or more persons as partners are jointly liable on a note or bill, due notice to one of them is sufficient.

If a note or bill is transferred as security, or even as payment of a pre-existing debt, the debt revives if the bill or note be dishonored.

Claims which do not rest upon a seal or judgment must be sued in most States within six years from the time when they arise.

Part payment of a debt which has passed the time of statutory limitation revives the whole debt, and the claim holds good for another period of six years from the date of such partial payment.

If, when a debt is due, the debtor is out of the State, the "six years" do not begin to run until he returns. If he afterward leave the State, the time forward counts the same as if he remained in the State.

An oral agreement must be proved by evidence. A written agreement proves itself. The law prefers written to oral evidence, because of its precision.

"Value received" is usually written in a note, and should be, but is not necessary. If not written, it is presumed by the law or may be supplied by proof.

No consideration is sufficient in law if it be illegal in its nature.

Checks or drafts should be presented during business hours, but in this country, except in the case of banks, the time extends through the day and evening.

The time of payment of a note must not depend upon a contingency The promise must be absolute.

A bill may be written upon any paper or substitute for it, either with ink or pencil.

The payee should be distinctly named in the note, unless it is payable to bearer.

Notice of protest may be sent either to the place of business or of residence of the party notified.

The loss of a bill or note is not sufficient excuse for not giving notice of protest.

An indorsement may be written on the face or back.

LAWS OF CONTRACTS.

A contract is an agreement of two or more parties, by which reciprocal rights and obligations are created. One party acquires a right, enforceable at law, to some act or forbearance from the other, who is under a corresponding obligation to thus act or forbear.

Generally speaking, all contracts which are made between two competent parties, for a proper consideration, without fraud and for a lawful purpose, are enforceable at law.

To the creation of a valid contract there must be:

1. Precise agreement. The offer of one party must be met by an acceptance by the other, according to the terms offered.

2 There must be a consideration. Something of value must either be received by one party or given up by the other.

3 The parties must have capacity to contract. The contracts of insane persons are not binding upon them. Married women are now generally permitted to contract as though single, and bind their separate property. The contracts of an infant (minor) are generally not binding upon him, unless ratified after attaining his majority. The contracts of an infant for "necessaries" may be enforced against him to the extent of the reasonable value of the goods furnished. It is incumbent upon one seeking thus to hold an infant to show that the goods furnished were in fact necessary to the infant, and that he was not already supplied by his parents or guardians.

4. The party's consent must not be the result of fraud or imposition, or it may be avoided by the party imposed upon.

5. The purpose of the parties must be lawful. Agreements to defraud others, to violate statutes, or whose aim is against public policy, such as to create monopolies, or for the corrupt procurement of legislative or official action, are void, and cannot be enforced by any party thereto.

Contracts in general are equally valid, whether made orally or in writing, with the exception of certain classes of contracts, which in most of the States are required to be attested by a note or memorandum in writing by the party or his agent sought to be held liable. Some of the provisions, which are adopted from the old English Statute of Frauds, vary in some of the States, but the following contracts very generally are required to be thus attested by some writing:

Contracts by their terms not to be performed within a year from the making thereof.

A promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person.

Contracts made in consideration of marriage, except mutual promises to marry.

Promise of an executor, or administrator, to pay debts of deceased out of his own property.

Contracts for the creation of any interest of estate in land, with the exception of leases for a short term, generally one year.

Contracts for the sale of goods above a certain value, unless a portion of the price is paid or part of the goods delivered. The required value of the goods sold varies in different States from $30 to $200. In a number of the States no such provision exists.

In many of the States declarations or conveyances of trust estates.

In many States representations as to the character, credit, or responsibility of another person.

Partial performance of the contract is generally held to dispense with the necessity for a writing.

If the damages liable to result from the breaking of a contract are uncertain, the parties may agree upon a sum to which either may be entitled as compensation for a breach, which will be upheld by the courts, but if the sum so fixed is not designed as a fair compensation to the party injured, but as a penalty to be inflicted, it will be disregarded.

A party is generally excused for the failure to perform what he has agreed only by the act of God or the public enemy, Except in cases involving a personal element in the work to be performed, such as the rendition of services, when the death or sickness of the party contracting to perform them is a valid excuse, or contracts for the performance of work upon a specified object, when its destruction without the fault of the party sought to be held liable is a sufficient excuse.

Written instruments are to be construed and interpreted by law according to the simple, customary and natural meaning of the words used. No evidence can be introduced to contradict or vary a written contract but it may be received in order to explain it, when such explanation is necessary.

POINTS OF CRIMINAL LAW.

Law should be, and is intended to constitute, a rule of right governing the actions of man in his dealings with his fellow-beings.

You cannot lawfully condone an offense by receiving back stolen property.

The exemption of females from arrest applies only in civil not in criminal matters.

Every man is bound to obey the call of a sheriff for assistance in making an arrest.

The rule "Every man's house is his castle" does not hold good when a man is accused of crime.

Embezzlement can be charged only against a clerk or a servant, or the officer or agent of a corporation.

Bigamy cannot be proven in law if one party to a marriage has been absent and not heard from for five years.

Grand larceny is when the value of property stolen exceeds $25.00—when less than that, the offense is petit larceny.

Arson to be in the first degree must have been committed at night, and the buildings fired must have been inhabited.

Drunkenness is not a legal excuse for crime, but delirium tremens is considered by the law as a species of insanity.

In a case of assault it is only necessary to prove an "offer or attempt at assault." Battery presumes physical violence.

Mayhem, although popularly supposed to refer to injury to the face, lip, tongue, eye, or ear, applies to any injury done a limb.

A felony is a crime punishable by imprisonment in a State prison; an "infamous" crime is one punishable with death or State prison.

A police officer is not authorized to make an arrest without a warrant unless he has personal knowledge of the offense for which the arrest is made.

An accident is not a crime, unless criminal carelessness can be proven. A man shooting at a burglar and killing a member of his family is not a murderer.

Burglary in the first degree can be committed only in the night time. Twilight, if dark enough to prevent distinguishing a man's face, is the same as "night" in law.

Murder to be in the first degree must be wilful, premeditated, and malicious, or committed while the murderer is engaged in a felonious act. The killing of a man in a duel is murder, and it is a misdemeanor to accept or give a challenge.

False swearing is perjury in law only when wilfully done, and when the oath has been legally administered. Such qualifying expressions as "to the best of my belief," "as I am informed," may save an averment from being perjured. The law is that the false statement sworn to must be absolute. Subornation of perjury—that is, inducing another to swear falsely, is a felony.

The penalties which follow the violation of any of the points of criminal law vary slightly in various places, but all include fines or imprisonment, or both. The penalties are intended to be sufficiently severe to deter those evilly disposed from disturbing the peace and happiness of the community.

PARTNERSHIPS.

Partnerships may be either general or special. In general partnership money invested ceases to be individual property. Each member is made personally liable for the whole amount of debts incurred by the company. The company is liable for all contracts or obligations made by individual members.

Special partners are not liable beyond the amount contributed.

A person may become a partner by allowing people generally to presume that he is one, as, by having his name on the sign or parcel or in the bills used in the business.

A share or specific interest in the profits or loss of a business, as remuneration for labor may involve one in the liability of a partner.

In case of bankruptcy, the joint estate is first applied to the payment of partnership debts, the surplus only going to the creditors of the individual estate.

A dissolution of partnership may take place under express stipulations in the articles of agreement, by mutual consent, by the death or insanity of one of the firm, by award of arbitrators, or by court of equity in cases of misconduct of some member of the firm.

A partner signing his individual name to negotiable paper, which is for the use of the partnership firm, binds all the partners thereby. Negotiable paper of the firm, even though given on private account by one of the partners, will hold all the partners of the firm, when it passes into the hands of the holders, who are ignorant of the fact attending its creation.

Partnership effects may be bought and sold by a partner; he may make contracts; may receive money; indorse, draw and accept bills and notes, and, while this may be for his own private account, if it apparently be for the use of the firm, his partners will be bound by his action, provided the parties dealing with him were ignorant of the transaction being on his private account; and thus representation or misrepresentation of a partner, having relation to business of the firm, will bind the members in the partnership.

In case of death, the surviving partner must account to the representatives of the deceased.

AGENTS AND ATTORNEYS.

An agent or an attorney is one authorized by a person to act for him and in his stead, in the transaction of business for the person appointing said agent or attorney.

In regard to the subject of an agency, the general rule is, that whatever a man may do in his own right he may also transact through another. Things of a personal nature, implying personal confidence on the part of the person possessing them, cannot be delegated.

Infants, married women, lunatics, idiots, aliens, belligerents, and persons incapable of making legal contracts, cannot act as principals in the appointment of agents. Infants and married women may, however, become principals in certain cases.

The act of the agent always binds his principal. Agents who exceed their authority, become themselves personally responsible to their principals.

One should not consent to act as an agent or attorney in complicated matters, except where the powers of this office be explicitly defined in writing.

Agency may be terminated in two ways: (1) by the act of the principal or agent; (2) by operation of law. In the latter case, the termination of the agency is effected by lapse of time, by completion of the subject-matter of the agency, by the extinction of the subject-matter, or by the insanity, bankruptcy or death of either party.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Leases for one year or less need no written agreement, Leases for more than a year must be in writing; if for life, signed, sealed, and witnessed in the same manner as any other important document

Leases for over three years must be recorded. No particular form is necessary.

If no agreement in writing for more than a year can be produced, the tenant holds the property from year to year at the will of the landlord If there is no agreement as to time, the tenant as a rule holds from year to year.

A tenancy at will may be terminated by giving the tenant one month's notice in writing, requiring him to remove from the premises occupied.

A tenant is not responsible for taxes, unless it be so stated in the lease.

The tenant may underlet as much of the property as he desires, unless it is expressly forbidden in the lease. Tenants at will cannot underlet.

A married woman cannot lease her property under the common law, but this prohibition is removed by statute in most of the States. A husband cannot make a lease which will bind his wife's property after his death.

A lease made by a minor is not binding after the minor has attained his majority. It binds the lessee, however, unless the minor should release him. Should the minor receive rent after attaining his majority, the lease will be therefore ratified. A lease given by a guardian will not extend beyond the majority of the ward.

A new lease renders void a former lease.

In case there are no writings, the tenancy begins from the day possession is taken; where there are writings and the time of commencement is not stated. the tenancy will be held to commence from the date of said writings.

Leases on mortgaged property, whereon the mortgage was given prior to the lease, terminate when the mortgage is foreclosed.

Where a tenant assigns his lease, even with the landlord's consent, he will remain liable for the rent unless his lease is surrendered or cancelled.

A building erected by tenants on foundations sunk into the ground, becomes a part of the realty, and belong to the landlord. Improvements to the building rented, that are nailed or screwed to the building become the property of the landlord. But trade fixtures belong to the tenant, it being presumed when the building is rented for trade purposes that it is permissible to put in the fixtures or make necessary attachments of same to the building.

LAWS GOVERNING LIENS.

In all the States and Canada it is the object of the law to protect the mechanic and laboring man and also the merchant. Hence there are laws in the several States for this purpose. While the general trend is the same, the laws vary in details. It is not difficult to procure a copy of the laws, which every builder and householder should do. Any contractor, sub-contractor or laborer who performs any work, or furnishes any materials, in pursuance of, or in conformity with, any agreement or contract with the owner, lessee, agent or one in possession of the property, toward the erection, altering, improving or repairing of any building, shall have a lien for the value of such labor or materials on the building or land on which it stands to the extent of the right, title and interest of the owner, lessee or person in possession at the time of the claimant's filing his notice with the clerk of the county court. Such lien is called a mechanic's lien.

The notice should be filed within thirty days after completion of the work or the furnishing of the materials, and should state the residence of the claimant, the amount claimed, from whom due, when due, and to whom due, the name of the person against whom claimed, the name of the owner, lessee or person in possession of the premises, with a brief description of the latter.

Liens cease in one year after the filing of the notice, unless an action is begun, or the lien is continued by an order of court.

The following classes of persons are generally entitled to lien: (1) Bailees, who may perform labor and services, on the thing bailed, at the request of the bailor. (2) Inn-keepers, upon the baggage of guests they have accommodated. (3) Common carriers, upon goods carried, for the amount of their freight and disbursements. (4) Vendors, on the goods sold for payment of the price where no credit has been expressly promised or implied. (5) Agents, upon goods of their principals, for advancements for the benefit of the latter. (6) All persons are entitled to the right of lien who are compelled by law to receive property and bestow labor or expense on the same.

The right of lien may be waived: (1) By express contract. (2) By neglect. (3) By new agreement. (4) By allowing change of possession. (5) By surrendering possession.

The manner of the enforcement of a lien, whether it be an inn-keeper's, agent's, carrier's, factor's, etc., depends wholly upon the nature and character of the lien.

Perishable property on which a lien is held may be sold, and the lien attaches to the proceeds.

Liens take precedence according to priority, and interest on a judgment on a prior lien must also be satisfied before a subsequent lien may be realized upon.

WILLS.

A Will or Testament is a final disposition of a person's property to take effect after his death. A codicil is an addition or alteration in such disposition. All persons are competent to make a will except idiots, persons of unsound mind, and infants. In many States a will of an unmarried woman is deemed revoked by her subsequent marriage. A nuncupative or unwritten will is one made orally by a soldier in active service, or by a mariner while at sea.

In most of the States a will must be in writing, signed by the testator, or by some person in his presence, and by his direction, and attested by witnesses, who must subscribe their names thereto in the presence of the testator. The form of wording a will is immaterial as long as its intent is clear.

Age at which persons may make wills is in most of the States 21 years. Males and females are competent to make wills at 18 years in the following States: California, Connecticut, Hawaiian Islands, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Utah; and in the following States only females at 18 years: Colorado, District of Columbia, Illinois, Maryland, Missouri, Washington, Wisconsin.

In the following States persons of 18 years may dispose of personal property only: Alabama, Arkansas, Missouri, Oregon, Rhode Island, Virginia, West Virginia; in Georgia any one over 14 years and in Louisiana any one over 16 years is competent to make a will. In Colorado persons of 17 years, and in New York males of 18 and females of 16 years may dispose of personalty.

Witnesses.—Most of the States require two witnesses, except in Connecticut (3), Maine (3), Massachusetts (3), New Hampshire (3), South Carolina (3), Vermont (3).

TIME AND DATING.

DIVISIONS OF TIME.

The interval between two consecutive transits of a fixed star over any meridian or the interval during which the earth makes one absolute revolution on its axis is called a Sidereal Day, and is invariable, while the interval between two consecutive transits of the Sun over any meridian is called an Apparent Solar Day, and its length varies from day to day by reason of the variable motion of the earth in its orbit, and the inclination of this orbit to the equator on which time is measured.

A Mean Solar Day is the average or mean of all the apparent solar days in a year. Mean Solar Time is that shown by a well-regulated clock or watch, while Apparent Solar Time is that shown by a well-constructed sun-dial; the difference between the two at any time is the Equation of Time, and may amount to 16 minutes and 21 seconds. The Astronomical Day begins at noon and the Civil Day at the preceding midnight. The Sidereal and Mean Solar Days are both invariable, but one day of the latter is equal to 1 day, 3 minutes and 56.555 seconds of the former.

The interval during which the earth makes one absolute revolution round the Sun is called a Sidereal Year, and consists of 365 days, 6 hours, 9 minutes, and 9.6 seconds, which is invariable.

The Tropical Year is the interval between two consecutive returns of the Sun to the Vernal Equinox. If this were a fixed point, the Sidereal and Tropical Years would be identical; but in consequence of the disturbing influence of the Moon and planets on the spheroidal figure of the earth, the Equinox has a slow, retrograde mean motion of 50″.26 annually, so that the Sun returns to the Equinox sooner every year than he otherwise would by 20 minutes 23.6 seconds; the Tropical Year, therefore, consists of 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 46 seconds. The Tropical Year is not of uniform length; it is now slowly decreasing at the rate of .595 second per century, but this variation will not always continue.

Julius Cæsar, in B. C. 45, was the first to reform the calendar by ordering that every year whose date number is exactly divisible by 4 contain 366 days, and all other years 365 days. The intercalary day was introduced by counting the sixth day before the Kalends of March twice; hence the name bissextile, from bis, twice, and sex, six. He also changed the beginning of the year, from 1st of March to the 1st of January, and also changed the name of the fifth month (Quintillis) to July, after himself. The average length of the Julian year is therefore 365¼ days, which, however, is too long by 11 minutes and 14 seconds, and this would accumulate in 400 years, to about three days. The Julian Calendar continued in use until A. D. 1582, when the date of the beginning of the seasons occurred 10 days later than in B. C. 45, when this mode of reckoning time was introduced.

The Gregorian Calendar was introduced by Pope Gregory XIII, with the view of keeping the Equinox to the same day of the month. It consists of 365 days, but every year exactly divisible by 4 and the centurial years which are exactly divisible by 400 contain 366 days; and if in addition to this arbitrary arrangement the centurial years exactly divisible by 4,000 contain 366 days, the error in the Gregorian system will amount to only one day in about 20 centuries. If, however, 31 leap years were intercalated in 128 years, instead of 32 as at present, the calendar would be practically exact and the error would not amount to more than a day in 100,000 years. The length of the mean Gregorian Year may therefore be set down at 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, 12 seconds. The Gregorian Calendar was introduced into England and her colonies in 1752, at which time the Equinox had retrograded 11 days since the Council of Nice in A. D. 325, when the festival of Easter was established and the Equinox occurred on March 21, hence September 3, 1752, was called September 14, and at the same time the commencement of the legal year was changed from March 25 to January 1, so that the year 1751 lost the months of January and February and the first 24 days of March. The difference between the Julian and Gregorian Calendars is now 13 days. Russia and the Greek Church still employ the Julian Calendar for civil and ecclesiastical purposes.

STANDARD TIME.

Primarily, for the convenience of the railroads, a standard of time was established by mutual agreement in 1883, by which trains are run and local time regulated. According to this system, the United States, extending from 65° to 125° west longitude, is divided into four time sections, each of 15° of longitude, exactly equivalent to one hour, commencing with the 75th meridian. The first (eastern) section includes all territory between the Atlantic Coast and an irregular line drawn from Detroit to Charleston, S. C., the latter being its most southern point. The second (central) section includes all the territory between the last-named line and an irregular line from Bismarck, N D., to the mouth of the Rio Grande. The third (mountain) section includes all territory between the last-named line and nearly the western borders of Idaho, Utah, and Arizona. The fourth (Pacific) section covers the rest of the country to the Pacific Coast. Standard time is uniform inside each of these sections, and the time of each section differs from that next to it by exactly one hour. Thus at 12 noon in New York City (eastern time), the time at Chicago (central time) is 11 o'clock A. M.; at Denver (mountain time), 10 o'clock A. M., and at San Francisco (Pacific time), 9 o'clock A. M. Standard time is 16 minutes slower at Boston than true local time, 4 minutes slower at New York, 8 minutes faster at Washington, 19 minutes faster at Charleston, 28 minutes slower at Detroit, 18 minutes faster at Kansas City, 10 minutes slower at Chicago, 1 minute faster at St. Louis, 28 minutes faster at Salt Lake City, and 10 minutes faster at San Francisco.

The above table applies to ordinary years only. For leap year, one day must be added to each number of days after February 28.

EXAMPLE.—To find the number of days between June 3, 1900, and February 16, 1901: The figures opposite the third day in the first June column are 154; those opposite the sixteenth day in the second February column are 412. Subtract the first from the second product—i. e., 154 from 412, and the result is 258, the number of days between the two dates.

THE ANCIENT AND MODERN YEAR.

The Athenians began the year in June, the Macedonians in September, the Romans first in March and afterward in January, the Persians on August 11, the ancient Mexicans on February 23, the Mohammedans in July. The Chinese year, which begins early in February, is similar to the Mohammedan in having 12 months of 29 and 30 days alternately; but in every nineteen years there are seven years which have 13 months. This is not quite correct, and the Chinese have therefore formed a cycle of 60 years, in which period 22 intercalary months occur.

NOTE.—The letters in the list of "Years from 1753 to 1952" refer to the table headed with the Months, the figures in which refer to the same figures at the head of the table of Days. For example—To know on what day July 4, 1910, will fall look for 1910 in the table of Years. The letter "c" attached. Look for the same letter in the table of Months and in a parallel line under July is the figure 5, which directs to column 5 in the table of Days below, in which it will be seen that July 4 falls on Monday.

November —. General Election Day: In Arizona, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Idaho (Illinois in Chicago, Springfield and East St. Louis only), Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming, in the years when elections are held therein.
November —. Thanksgiving Day (usually the last Thursday): Is observed in all the States and in the District of Columbia, Porto Rico and Alaska, though in some States it is not a statutory holiday.
December 25. Christmas Day: In all the States, District of Columbia, Porto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska.

Sundays and Fast Days are legal holidays in all the States which designate them as such.

There are no statutory holidays in Mississippi, but by common consent the Fourth of July, Thanksgiving and Christmas are observed. In New Mexico, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Labor Day, Flag Day (June 14) and Arbor Day are holidays when so designated by the Governor. In South Carolina, Thursday of Fair Week is a legal holiday.

Arbor Day is a legal holiday in Arizona, Florida, Maryland, New Mexico, Wisconsin, and Wyoming, the day being set by the Governor; in Texas, February 22; Nebraska, April 22; Utah, April 15; Rhode Island, second Friday in May; Montana, second Tuesday in May; Georgia, first Friday in December; Colorado and Maine (school holidays only), third Friday in April; in Oklahoma, the Friday following the second Monday in March; in Arkansas, first Saturday in March.

Every Saturday after 12 o'clock noon is a legal holiday in California in public offices, Illinois (in cities of 200,000 or more inhabitants), Maryland, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Virginia, the District of Columbia (for banking purposes), and in New Orleans, La., and Charleston, S. C. In Louisiana in all cities exceeding 15,000 inhabitants; in Missouri in cities of 100,000 or more inhabitants; in Tennessee, for State and county officers, and in Colorado during June, July, and August; in Indiana, first Saturday in June to last Saturday in October, inclusive, for all public offices in counties having a county-seat of 100,000 population or more.

There is no national holiday, not even the Fourth of July, Congress has at various times appointed special holidays. In the second session of the Fifty-third Congress it passed an act making Labor Day a public holiday in the District of Columbia, and it has recognized the existence of certain days as holidays for commercial purposes, but, with the exception named, there is no general statute on the subject. The proclamation of the President designating a day of Thanksgiving only makes it a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the Territories.

POSTAL RATES.

DOMESTIC.

The following rates apply to the United States and its foreign possessions, to mail of officers and members of crews of United States Naval Vessels and to officers and men of the United States Expeditionary Forces in Europe, to Shanghai, China, and, with certain exceptions, to Canada, Cuba, Mexico and the Republic of Panama, and to other places where the United States mail service is in operation. Prepayment of postage, in stamps affixed is required. By special permission, however, postage on matter of the 3d and 4th classes mailed in quantities of not less than 2,000 identical pieces may be paid in money.

Registration. Letters or packages can be registered by adding stamps to the amount of 10 cents to the regular rate.

Reforwarding. Letters will be forwarded from one post office to another upon the written request of the person addressed, without additional charge; but unclaimed packages cannot be returned to the sender until stamps are furnished to pay the return postage.

Special delivery stamps, at 10 cents each, used in addition to regular rates, insure delivery immediately on arrival at office of destination. These stamps can be used for no other purpose. Or, by putting on 10 cents in ordinary stamps additional to the regular postage and writing under them "Special Delivery" the same result is attained.

Unmailable Matter.—Harmful, poisonous, explosive, offensive, obscene, defamatory, fraudulent material or communications are not mailable.

1st Class.—Letters, sealed packages and all matter wholly or partly in writing, whether sealed or unsealed (except manuscript copy accompanying proof sheets or corrected proof sheets of the same), and all matter closed against inspection, 2 cents each ounce or fraction thereof.

Post cards (private mailing cards) and postal cards, 1 cent each. Double, or "reply" postal cards, 2 cents.

2d Class.—Newspapers and Periodicals bearing notice of entry as second-class matter, when sent unsealed by others than the publisher or a news agent, 1 cent for each four ounces or fraction thereof, on each separately addressed copy or package of unaddressed copies. The copies must be complete. Incomplete copies are third-class matter.

3d Class.—Circulars, newspapers and periodicals not embraced in the term "book," miscellaneous printed matter on paper not having the nature of an actual personal correspondence, proof-sheets, corrected proof-sheets, and manuscript copy accompanying same, and matter in point print or raised characters used by the blind, 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, on each individually addressed piece or package on unsealed third-class matter. Limit of weight 4 pounds. Parcels of printed matter weighing more than 4 pounds which do not exceed the limit of weight and size for fourth class matter come within that class.

4th Class.—Embraces that known as Domestic Parcel Post mail and includes merchandise, farm and factory products, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, books (including catalogs), miscellaneous printed matter weighing more than four pounds and all other mailable matter not embraced in the first, second and third classes. Parcels may be insured against losses and may be sent C. O. D. RATES OF POSTAGE—To be fully prepaid—unsealed: (a) Parcels weighing 4 ounces or less, except books, seeds, plants, etc., 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof, any distance. (b) Parcels weighing 8 ounces or less containing books, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants, 1 cent for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof, regardless of distance. (c) Parcels weighing more than 8 ounces containing books, seeds, plants, etc., parcels of miscellaneous printed matter weighing more than 4 pounds, and all other parcels of fourth class matter weighing more than 4 ounces are chargeable, according to distance or zone at the pound rate shown in the table on the next page, a fraction of a pound being considered as a full pound.

The local rate applies to parcels mailed under the following conditions:

(1) At any post office for local delivery at such office;

(2) At any city letter carrier office, or at any point within its delivery limits, for delivery by carriers from that office;

(3) At any post office from which a rural route starts, for delivery on such route, or when mailed at any point on a rural route for delivery at any other point thereon, or at the office from which the route starts, or for delivery on any other rural route starting from the same office.

Alaska, Hawaiian and Philippine Islands, etc. The eighth zone rate of 12 cents for each pound or fraction thereof on all parcels weighing more than 4 ounces (except books, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants, weighing 8 ounces or less), applies (1) between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands; (2) between the United States and its postal agency at Shanghai, China; (3) between any two points in Alaska and between any point in Alaska and any other point in the United States; (4) between the United States and the Canal Zone; (5) between the United States and the Philippine Islands; (6) to, from or between Guam, Tutuila and Manoa and other islands of the Samoan group east of longitude 171° west of Greenwich, and the United States and its other possessions; (7) between the United States and its naval vessels stationed in foreign waters.

Canada, Cuba, Mexico and Republic of Panama. The rate of 12 cents for each pound or fraction thereof also applies to fourth-class matter, including seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants (but excepting books and other printed matter on which the rate is 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof in all cases), weighing more than 4 ounces and not exceeding 4 pounds 6 ounces, when mailed to Canada, Mexico, Cuba and the Republic of Panama. (Parcels weighing up to 11 pounds may be sent to Mexico and the Republic of Panama as foreign parcel post mail under the parcel post conventions with those countries.)

The Limit of Weight of fourth-class matter is 70 pounds for parcels mailed for delivery within the first, second and third zones, and 50 pounds for all other zones.

Limit of Size. Parcel post matter may not exceed 84 inches in length and girth combined. In measuring a parcel the greatest distance in a straight line between the ends (but not around the parcel), is taken as its length, while the distance around the parcel at its thickest part is taken as its girth. For example, a parcel 35 inches long, 10 inches wide, and 5 inches high measures 65 inches in length and girth combined.

Name and Address of Sender. A parcel of fourth-class matter may not be accepted for mailing unless it bears the name and address of the sender, which should be preceded by the word "from."

Additions to Fourth-class Mail. The written additions permissible upon third-class matter also may be placed on fourth-class matter, together with any marks, numbers, names, or letters for purpose of description, or they may be placed on the wrapper or cover, tag or label. There may be written on the blank leaves or cover of any book a simple manuscript dedication or inscription not in the nature of personal correspondence. Space sufficient for a legible address, postmark and the necessary postage stamps must be left on the address side of parcels.

ZONES—PARCEL POST GUIDE AND MAPS. For parcel post purposes the United States is divided into units of area thirty minutes square. Such units form the basis of the eight postal zones. To ascertain in which zone a post office is located from the office of mailing, a parcel post guide, costing 55 cents, and map, costing 20 cents, are jointly used. The guide applies to all offices, but a separate map is required for each unit. A zone key is furnished with the guide for use in the units of area in which some of the largest post offices are located, and makes the map for those units unnecessary. The guide and maps may be purchased by sending a money order to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, D. C. Stamps are not accepted

Inclosures. There may be inclosed with fourth-class matter a written or printed invoice showing the name and address of the sender and of the addressee; the names and quantities of articles inclosed, together with inscriptions indicating "for purpose of description," the price, style, stock number, size, and quality of the articles; the order or file number, date of order, and date and manner of shipment; and the initials or name of the salesman, or of the person by whom the articles were packed or checked.

Place of Mailing. Parcels of fourth-class matter weighing more than four ounces must be mailed at a post office, branch post office, named, lettered or numbered station or delivered to a rural or other carrier duly authorized to receive such matter. Parcels weighing four ounces or less not sent as insured mail may be deposited in letter or package boxes.

INSURANCE OF FOURTH-CLASS MAIL.

Fees and Conditions. Fourth-class or domestic parcel post mail (but no other) may be insured against loss upon payment of a fee of 5 cents for value not exceeding $25, or 10 cents for value not exceeding $50, or 25 cents for value not exceeding $100, in addition to the postage, both to be prepaid with stamps affixed.

Such mail may be insured at any post office or station thereof, or by rural carriers. The sender must fill out an insurance tag, which will be furnished him on request, to be attached to the parcel.

COLLECT-ON-DELIVERY SERVICE.

Conditions and Fee. Fourth-class parcels may be sent C. O. D.—that is, the price of the article and the charges thereon (including, if desired, the postage and fee prepaid)—will be collected from the person addressed upon delivery, on payment of 10 cents, in addition to postage, when the amount to be remitted does not exceed $50, and 25 cents when the amount to be remitted does not exceed $100. These fees are paid by stamps affixed to the parcel. Such parcels are automatically insured for the actual value of the contents up to $50 and $100, respectively, according to fee paid.

A Receipt is given the sender of a C. O. D. parcel at the time of mailing but no return receipt is furnished, as the remittance shows that delivery has been made.

Examination of Contents of a C. O. D. Parcel is not permitted until it has been receipted for and all charges paid.

Indemnity for Lost C. O. D. Parcels is paid for the actual value not to exceed $50, under the conditions governing the payment of indemnity for lost insured parcels.

SOLDIERS' MAIL.

Letters, postcards and printed matter originating in the United States or any of its possessions for transmission to the United States expeditionary forces in Europe are subject to the United States domestic classification, conditions and rates of postage. Letter mail, 2 cents the ounce. Newspaper mail, 1 cent for 4 ounces. Letters should be addressed·

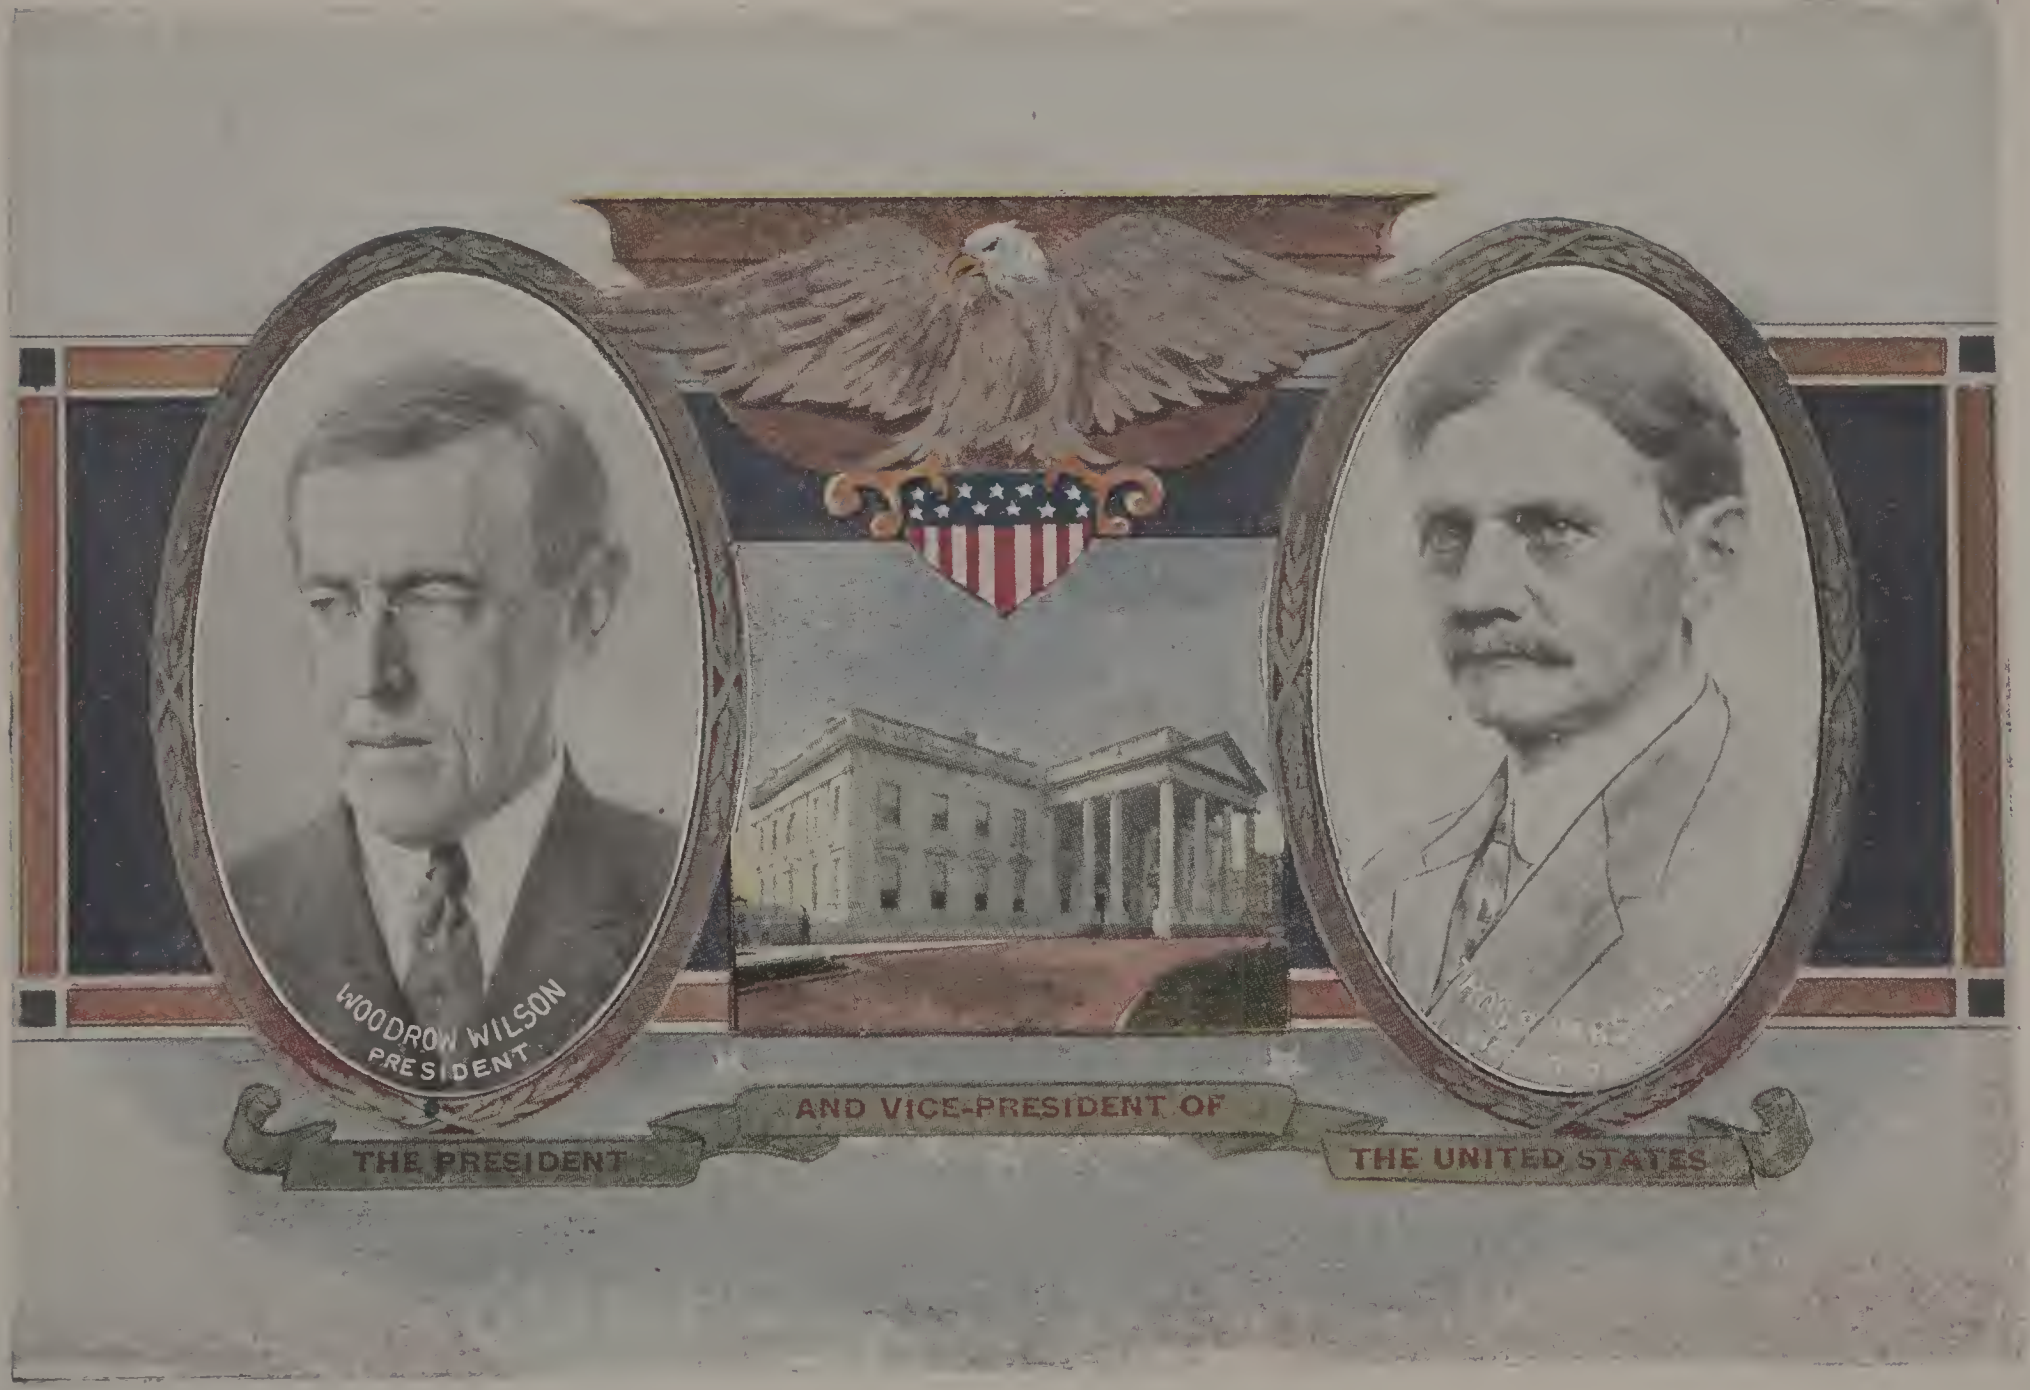
HOW WE ARE GOVERNED.

The United States of America is a Republic. The authority and powers of the government are limited and defined by the Constitution, a written document adopted by a Constitutional Convention in 1787 and ratified by the thirteen original states December 7, 1787, to May 27, 1790. The Constitution went into effect March 4, 1789 in the eleven states which had previously ratified it. The government of the United States is what is known as a Federal Government. The underlying principle is that each state of the union possesses the sovereignty in all matters which affect itself alone, while in all matters which relate to two or more of the states, or which have to do with foreign nations, the sovereign power is in the Federal Government.

The National Government has three distinct branches—Executive, Legislative, and Judicial.

THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH.



The executive power of the government is vested in the President of the United States of America. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of his office, they devolve on the Vice-President. The President conducts the affairs of the nation through Executive Departments, which were not established by the Constitution, but have been created, and their duties defined by acts of Congress. The Heads of Departments form the "official family" of the President, called the Cabinet. They are appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate and can be removed at his discretion. Members of the Cabinet receive a salary of $12,000 a year.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Qualifications.—The President must be a natural born citizen of the United States, at least thirty-five years of age, and for at least fourteen years a resident of the United States.

Compensation.—The President receives a salary of $75,000 a year, the White House is provided as his official residence, and his traveling expenses, not to exceed $25,000 a year, are paid by the government.

Time and Manner of Election.—The people of the United States do not vote directly for the President and Vice-President. On the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November of each year divisible by four, electors are chosen in each state. The number of electors in each state is equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which that state is entitled in the Congress. The electors thus chosen form the "Electoral College." In every state except Michigan the electors are voted for on a general ticket. In Michigan one elector is chosen in each congressional district and two from the state at large. The electors meet at their respective state capitals on the second Monday in January following their election, and cast their votes for President and Vice-President of the United States. Three certificates of the result are prepared and signed by all the electors. One of these is mailed and one sent by special messenger to the President of the Senate, the third is deposited with the federal district judge. On the second Wednesday in February, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, the certificates are opened by the President of the Senate, and the votes counted. The persons receiving a majority of the whole number of votes cast for President and Vice-President are declared elected. If no person has a majority of all the votes cast, the House of Representatives elects the President from among the three persons having the highest number of votes and the Senate elects the Vice-President from the two persons having the highest number.

Term of Office.—The President holds office for four years. He is eligible for re-election, but custom has decreed that no person shall fill the office for more than two successive terms. The President is inaugurated on March 4th of the year following his election, the oath of office being administered by the Chief Justice of the United States at the Capitol.

Powers and Duties.

(a) Military Powers.

The President is the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states when called into service of the United States.

He is responsible for the conduct of military operations, and has the war power of opening hostilities and instituting blockades. He may also declare martial law and by so doing suspend the writ of habeas corpus.

(b) Civil Powers.

1. The Veto Power.—The President cannot originate legislation, but every bill which has passed both Houses of Congress is submitted to him. If he approves, it becomes a law. If he vetoes, it is returned to Congress, and may still become a law if passed by a two-thirds vote in each house.

2. The Appointing Power.—The President appoints, with the confirmation of the Senate, ambassadors, ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all officers of the United States not otherwise provided for.

3. The Pardoning Power.—The President has the power to grant reprieves, commutation of sentence, and pardon for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

4. The Power to Conduct Foreign Affairs and Make Treaties.—Negotiations with foreign countries are carried on by the Department of State under the direction of the President. When a treaty is made, however, it must be ratified by the Senate with the consent of two-thirds of the members present.

5. The Power to Administer Internal Affairs.—The President is required to see that the laws of the United States are faithfully executed and has the power to enforce these laws.

6. The Power to Convene Congress.—The President may convene Congress in extraordinary session, to consider treaties, declare war, preserve the credit of the country, or provide funds for the conduct of the government, or transact other legislative business on occasions of emergency.

7. Annual and Special Messages.—The President is required, "from time to time, to give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient." It is the custom for the President to send an annual message at the opening of each Congress, reviewing the foreign and domestic affairs of the United States. He also submits special messages at any time when he considers it necessary to do so, with or without recommendations as to appropriate legislation.

8. Reception of Foreign Representatives.—It is the duty of the President to "receive ambassadors and other public ministers." Where two governments exist in the same country, the President determines which shall be recognized.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Qualifications.—They are the same as for the office of President.

Compensation.—The Vice-President receives a salary of $12,000 a year.

Time and Manner of Election.—The method of election of the Vice-President is substantially the same as that of the President. The slight differences have already been noted.

Powers and Duties.—The Vice-President is the presiding officer of the Senate. He is not a member of that body, however, and does not have the right to vote except in case of a tie.

Succession to the Presidency.—In case of the death, resignation or inability of the President, the Vice-President immediately succeeds to that office. In case of the death or disability of the Vice-President also, the Secretary of State (if he is qualified to be elected President), and after him the Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Attorney-General, Postmaster-General, Secretary of the Navy and Secretary of the Interior, in this order, will hold the office of President. (The Secretaries of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor were created after the passage of the act.)

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

Duties of Secretary of State.—The Secretary of State is charged, under the direction of the President with the duties appertaining to correspondence with the public ministers and the consuls of the United States, and with the representatives of foreign powers accredited to the United States; and to negotiations of whatever character relating to the foreign affairs of the United States. He is the medium of correspondence between the President and the chief executives of the several states of the United States; he has the custody of the Great Seal of the United States. He is regarded as the first in rank among the members of the Cabinet. He is the custodian of the treaties made with foreign states, and of the laws of the United States. He grants and issues passports, and exequaturs to foreign consuls in the United States are issued through his office. He publishes the laws and resolutions of Congress, amendments to the Constitution, and proclamations declaring the admission of new states into the Union. Salary $12,000.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is composed of nine members, each receiving a salary of $10,000 per annum. The regulating statutes apply to all common carriers engaged in the transportation of oil or other commodity, except water, and except natural or artificial gas, by means of pipe lines, or partly by pipe line and partly by rail, or partly by pipe line and partly by water, and to common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad (or partly by railroad and partly by water when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment). The statutes apply generally to interstate traffic, including import and domestic traffic, and also that which is carried wholly within any territory of the United States. Only traffic transported wholly within a single state is excepted.

The Commission has jurisdiction on complaint and after full hearing to determine and prescribe reasonable rates, regulations, and practices, and order reparation to injured shippers; to require any carriers to cease and desist from unjust discrimination or undue or unreasonable preference, and to institute and carry on proceedings for enforcement of the law. The Commission may also inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of the regulating statutes, and it may prescribe the accounts, records, and memoranda which shall be kept by the carriers, and from time to time inspect the same. The carriers must file annual reports with the Commission, and such other reports as may from time to time be required. Carriers failing to file and publish all rates and charges, as required by law, are prohibited from engaging in interstate transportation, and penalties are provided in the statute for failure on the part of carriers or of shippers to observe the rates specified in the published tariffs.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The purpose of the civil service act, as declared in its title, is "to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States." It provides for the appointment of three Commissioners (one at a salary of $4,500, two at $4,000), not more than two of whom shall be adherents of the same political party, and makes it the duty of the Commission to aid the President, as he may request, in preparing suitable rules for carrying the act into effect. The act requires that the rules shall provide, among other things, for open competitive examinations for testing the fitness of applications for the classified service, the making of appointments from among those passing with highest grades, an apportionment of appointments in the departments at Washington among the states and territories, a period of probation before absolute appointment and the prohibition of the use of official authority to coerce the political action of any person or body.

THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH.

All legislative powers of the National Government are vested in the Congress of the United States, which consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. Senators and Representatives each receive a salary of $7,500 a year. The Speaker of the House of Representatives receives $12,000 a year. They also receive a mileage fee of 20 cents per mile going to and returning from each regular session, and an allowance for newspaper, stationery, clerk hire and other necessary expenditures.

Sessions.—A Congress begins on the 4th day of March in every odd-numbered year and continues until the second succeeding 4th day of March. Such "Congress shall assemble at least once in every year." This meeting is called a session, and the regular date for its commencement is the first Monday in December. A Congress has thus two sessions. The first, called the "Long Session," commencing on the first Monday in December in an odd-numbered year continues until the next succeeding spring or summer. The second, or "Short Session," commencing on the first Monday in December in an even-numbered year, continues until the next 4th day of March.

SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Senate is composed of two Senators from each state, chosen by the people thereof, for six years.

Qualifications.—A Senator must have attained to the age of thirty years and have been nine years a citizen of the United States He must be an inhabitant of the State for which he is chosen, and cannot hold any civil office under the United States during his term of office, nor serve as a Presidential Elector.

Election.—The Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States which was ratified by the necessary number of States on April 8, 1913, transferred the power of electing Senators from the State Legislature to the people at the polls. For more than sixty years proposals were made to change the Constitution in this manner; but it was not until June 24, 1911, that the Senate was induced to give its consent to the change. The original theory in establishing the choice of Senators was that they represented the States, whereas the members of the house directly represented the people.

The amendment reads:

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislatures.

When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies, provided that the Legislature of any State may empower the Executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the Legislature may direct.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House of Representatives is composed of 435 members chosen every second year (the even-numbered years) by the people of the several States.

Qualifications.—A Representative must have attained to the age of twenty-five years and have been seven years a citizen of the United States. He must be an inhabitant of the state from which he is chosen and cannot hold any civil office under the United States during his term of office nor serve as a Presidential Elector. By custom he is a resident of the district from which he is chosen.

Election.—The number of Representatives to which each state is entitled is determined by Congress after each decennial census. Congress has fixed the time of their election as the "Tuesday next after the first Monday in November."

in every even-numbered year. In states entitled to more than one Representative, they are elected by "districts composed of contiguous territory and containing as nearly as possible an equal number of inhabitants," which districts are determined and the boundaries fixed by the legislatures of the States. When, in a reapportionment, a state's representation is increased, the additional Representatives are chosen by vote of the whole state, until the state is redistricted. They are called Representatives or Congressmen-at-Large.

POWERS OF CONGRESS.

CIVIL.

To Raise Revenue.

(1) By direct taxation, through per capita, land and personal property taxes.

(2) By indirect taxation, through duties on imports (specific and ad valorem) and excises.

(3) By borrowing money.

To Regulate Commerce.

(1) Foreign and domestic: shipping regulations, harbor improvements, lighthouses, life-saving stations, licensing pilots, establishing quarantines, etc.

(2) Domestic: between states and with Indians.

To Maintain Business Stability.

(1) Coinage: minting and regulation of coin value (foreign and domestic).

(2) Weights and measures.

(3) Bankruptcy laws.

To Regulate Postal Service.

(1) Foreign: carriage of mails and postage.

(2) Domestic: post-offices, post-roads and postage.

To Encourage Science and Useful Arts.

(1) Patents: caveats and letters patent.

(2) Copyrights.

To Define Crimes.

(1) Exterritorial: piracy, felonies on the high seas, crimes against the laws of nations.

(2) Territorial: counterfeiting money and securities.

To declare war. To grant letters of marque and reprisal. To make rules as to captures on land and at sea. To raise and support armies and navies. To organize and call out militia for executing federal laws, for suppressing insurrections and repelling invasions.

THE JUDICIAL BRANCH.

The judicial power of the United States is vested in a Supreme Court, nine Circuit Courts of Appeal, eighty-three District Courts, a Court of Claims, a Court of Customs Appeals and a Commerce Court. Judges of the United States courts are appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate and serve during good behavior.

THE SUPREME COURT.

This Court is composed of a Chief Justice, salary $15,000, and eight Associate Justices, salary $14,500 each. The Court sits at Washington, and hold one session annually, commencing on the second Monday in October.

THE CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEAL.

They are nine in number and were created for the purpose of relieving the Supreme Court of certain classes of appeals. For each circuit there are appointed two or more circuit judges, salary $7,000 each. A Circuit Court of Appeals consists of three judges, two of whom form a quorum. It is held by the justice of the Supreme Court allotted to that circuit and two circuit judges, but a district judge is also competent to act. No judge, however, can hear a case in the Circuit Court of Appeal at the trial of which he presided in the District Court.

DISTRICT COURTS.

Congress has set apart each state as a judicial district, except in case of the more populous states, which are divided into two or more districts. There are eighty-three judicial districts in the states and territories. There are one or more resident judges in each district and the court is held by a district judge, salary $6,000.

THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

This Court consists of a Chief Justice, salary $6,500, and five associate judges, salary $6,000 each.

COURT OF CUSTOMS APPEALS.

Consists of a Presiding Judge and four Associate Judges, each of whom shall be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate and shall receive a salary of seven thousand dollars a year. The Court sits in the several judicial circuits and exercises exclusive appellate jurisdiction to review by appeal final decisions by a Board of General Appraisers in all cases as to the construction of the law and the facts respecting the classification of merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, and the fees and charges connected therewith, and all appealable questions as to the jurisdiction of said board, and all appealable questions as to the laws and regulations governing the collection of the customs revenues; and the judgments and decrees of said Court of Customs Appeals shall be final in all such cases.

JURISDICTION OF UNITED STATES COURT.

Supreme Court.—(A Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices).

Original jurisdiction.

In cases affecting,

Ambassadors, consuls.

Other public ministers.

When a state is a party.

Appellate Jurisdiction.

Directly from Circuit Courts of Appeal and District Courts, in cases involving jurisdiction of the court.

Supreme Court.—Continued.

Appellate jurisdiction in cases involving
- Interpretation of Federal Constitution or a treaty.
- Application of Federal Constitution to a
  - Federal law.
  - State constitution.
  - State law.

From Circuit Courts of Appeal, the Court of Claims and the Commerce Court in all cases in which the decisions are not final.

Inferior Courts of Original Jurisdiction.

District Courts. (District Judge.)
- Admiralty and maritime cases.
- Cases for penalties and forfeitures.
- Bankruptcy proceedings.
- Crimes.
- Civil actions:
- Infringement of personal rights.
- Cases under the revenue, patent, copyright and postal laws.

Court of Claims. (A Chief Justice and four Associate Justices.)
Claims.
- Founded on a law of Congress:
  - Regulation of any executive department.
  - Contract with the government.
- Referred by either House of Congress:

Court of Customs Appeals.

Cases arising from the collection of customs revenue.

Of Appellate Jurisdiction.

Circuit Courts of Appeal. (Justice of Supreme Court, two Circuit Judges and a District Judge, or any two of them.)
Judgments are final in all cases:
- Involving United States or state citizenship.
- Arising under
  - Patents and copyrights,
  - Revenue laws.
- Crimes.
- Admiralty cases.
- Civil suits less than $1,000

STATE GOVERNMENT.

The governments of the several states differ from one another, yet strongly resemble one another. Each state

1. Has a popular government.
2. Has a written Constitution.
3. Has the three great departments of government—executive, legislative and judicial.
4. Supports a system of public schools.
5. Provides for a system of local self-government.
6. Makes most of the laws that regulate the citizen in his daily pursuits.

THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

At the head of this department is the Governor, elected by the people, for a term of one to four years. It is his duty to see that the laws are executed. He may call to his assistance judges and sheriffs and, in case of need, the militia of the state. When public business is conducted with another state, the Governor acts in the name of the state. He sends a message to the legislature at the opening of its session, informing it of the conditions throughout the state, and in time of pressing need may call the legislature in extra session.

In many states the Governor has the power to pardon criminals, or commute their punishment.

Many officers are appointed by the Governor. In some states he appoints the judges of the state courts.

Most of the states elect a Lieutenant-Governor to serve when the Governor is unable to be at his post. He acts as the President of the State Senate.

The Secretary of State, sometimes elected, sometimes appointed by the Governor, is the highest clerk of the executive department.

The State Comptroller or Auditor manages the financial business of the state government.

The State Treasurer is the custodian of the funds of the state, which he disburses only on orders from the officers designated by law.

The Attorney-General is the law officer of the state.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction is the head of the school system of the state.

In addition to these officers, which are found in almost every state there are in many states other executive officers and boards whose duties are very important, such as

The Insurance Commissioner.
The Board of Railroad Commissioners.
The Inspector of Factories.
The Liquor License Commissioners.
The Board of Charities.
The Board of Health.
The Tax Commissioner.
The Board of Pardons.
The Superintendent of Banks.
The Board of Medical Examiners.
The Commissioner of Agriculture.
The Board of Public Works.

THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The Legislature of a state is always divided into two branches—A Senate and a House of Representatives. In some states the lower house is called the Assembly, in others the House of Delegates, in New Jersey the General Assembly. In many of the states the whole Legislature is called the General Assembly.

Both the Senate and the lower house are representative bodies. The counties or towns and cities are represented in the lower house according to population, determined by a census taken every five or ten years. The state is divided into senatorial districts from each of which a senator is elected. The minimum age for senators is generally higher than for representatives, and their term is usually longer.

The State Legislature may not pass any law contrary to the Constitution of the state nor of the United States. It grants charters for the government of cities, boroughs, and villages; and for the organization of railroad companies, banks, colleges, and many other public and private institutions.

It makes laws governing the public schools.

It defines the boundaries of counties and towns.

It makes laws concerning property, real and personal.

It makes laws concerning the social relations, marriages, divorces, etc.

It makes laws regulating the manner of holding elections and the qualificationsof voters.

It regulates railroads, and other public utilities operating within the state.

It regulates manufacturing, trading, mining, agriculture, hunting, fishing, etc.

THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

The lowest court is conducted by a justice of the peace or magistrate, who acts in the name of the state. He renders decisions only in small and unimportant cases.

The next court is called the Circuit Court, the District Court, the Superior Court, the Supreme Court or the Court of Common Pleas.

It sits in the court house at the county seat. The same judge may serve in several counties. The judges are generally elected, but in some states appointed by the Governor. Appeals from the lower court are taken to the Supreme Court, or Court of Appeals, the highest court of the state. It usually meets at the capital of the state. In some states there is an intermediate court between the lower and higher, which hears appeals in certain classes of cases.

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The municipal government of the District of Columbia is vested by act of Congress approved June 11, 1878, in three Commissioners, two of whom are appointed by the President from citizens of the District having had three years' residence therein immediately preceding that appointment, and confirmed by the Senate. The other Commissioner is detailed by the President of the United States from the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army.

and must have lineal rank senior to captain, or be a captain who has served at least fifteen years in the Corps of Engineers of the Army. The Commissioners appoint the subordinate official service of said government, except the Board of Education, which is appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

THE COUNTY.

Every state and territory is divided into counties (in Louisiana called parishes). In the Southern States and in many of the western states the county—outside of towns and cities—assumes most of the functions of local government. Each county has a county seat where the public business is transacted. Most of this business is done by a Board of County Commissioners or Supervisors, called in some states the county court; in others the levy court, because it levies the taxes. There are no County Commissioners in Rhode Island.

As a rule the County Commissioners

Fix the rate of taxation for the county.

Appropriate money for the payment of the salaries of county officers and to meet the other expenses of county government.

Make contracts for building and repairing roads and bridges.

Appoint subordinate county officials.

Represent the county in the courts when it is sued for damages.

At every county seat one or more judges sit for the trial of cases. These judges are generally state officers, but they receive the assistance of several county officers.

The Sheriff carries out the orders of the judge. He has the custody of prisoners, executes the death penalty, sells property, and preserves peace and order. When necessary he may call to his aid deputies or helpers.

The Prosecuting Attorney, called also the State's Attorney, the District Attorney, the County Attorney, or the Solicitor, appears in the county court and presents the case against a criminal.

The Coroner takes charge of the body of a person found dead or who dies mysteriously, and inquires into the cause of death. If foul play is suspected, he impanels a jury and holds an "inquest." In some states in case of a vacancy by death, resignation or inability to act of the sheriff he assumes the duties of that office.

The Clerk of the County Court or Prothonotary keeps the records of the county court. In some states he keeps a record of deeds and mortgages, issues marriage certificates and records births and deaths.

Above officers are found in almost every state; in many states there are also

The County Treasurer.

The County Auditor.

The County Assessors.

The County Tax Collectors.

The Register or Recorder of Deeds.

The Superintendent of Schools.

The Probate or Orphans' Court.—In Georgia the judge of this court is called "Ordinary;" in New York and New Jersey "Surrogate."

THE TOWNSHIP.

In the Middle Atlantic and Middle Western States, township government is organized. It usually supports public schools, cares for public roads, and helps the poor. In many states it levies and collects taxes for these purposes. The township officers vary greatly in different states. The more usual ones are

The Supervisor or Trustee, who cares for roads and bridges.

The School Directors, who control the public schools.

The Township Clerk.

The Assessors.

The Tax Collector.

The Auditors.

The Constable, who assists the justice of the peace and is the peace officer of the township.

The Overseers of the Poor.

THE TOWN.

The town is characteristic of New England. Its most important feature is the town meeting, of all citizens, usually held once a year in the town hall. At this meeting the rate of taxation is fixed, money is appropriated, by-laws are passed and officers are elected. The principal officers are

The Selectmen who carry into effect the measures adopted at the town meeting.

The Town Clerk, who keeps the records.
The Assessors.
The Tax Collector.
The Town Treasurer.
The Overseers of the Poor.
The Constable.
The Surveyor of Highways, who keeps roads and bridges in repair.
The Fence Viewers, who settle disputes over boundaries.
The Field Driver or Pound Keeper, who takes charge of stray animals.

THE VILLAGE OR BOROUGH.

In thickly settled communities, a village is organized under a charter from the state. It usually has a President or Mayor or Chief Burgess and a body of Trustees, Commissioners, Councilmen or Burgesses, who pass local laws or ordinances, levy taxes, and provide for police and fire protection, street paving, sewerage, etc.; and School Directors, who provide for the needs of the schools. It may also have a Clerk, a Treasurer, Assessors, a Tax Collector, a Constable, and a Street Commissioner.

THE CITY.

When the village or borough grows to a large size, it becomes a city. It is still organized under a charter from the state, but with broader functions and greater powers. The city always has two departments—executive and legislative—the judicial department being a part of the state government.

The Mayor is the executive officer of the city. His powers and functions vary greatly. He is nearly always elected by the people, but in a few cases chosen by City Council. His term of office varies from one to four years. His chief duty is to carry out the ordinances of Council. In most cities he can veto an ordinance, but it can be passed over his veto by a two-thirds or three-fourths vote.

The business of a city is usually carried on by departments such as:

The Department of Police, with police commissioners.

The Department of Highways, with a street commissioner and engineer or surveyor.

The Department of Public Safety, with fire and health commissioners; building, boiler and plumbing inspectors.

The Department of Charities, with overseers of the poor.

The Department of Education, with school commissioners.

The Department of Parks, with park commissioners.

The Department of Finance, with an auditor or comptroller.

The Department of Law, with a city solicitor or corporation counsel.

The City Council is the legislative department of the city. In large cities it often has two branches, whose members are called Aldermen and Councilmen. These members are usually elected by wards. They meet in the City Hall and make laws, called ordinances, for the government of the city. Their powers and limitations are defined by the city charter and the laws passed by the state legislature.

The Commission Plan.—In many cities throughout all the several states of the Union the "Commission" plan of city government has been adopted. The commission consists of a Mayor and a small body of Councilmen or Aldermen, each the head of a department, and all elected by the whole body of voters without regard to wards or precincts and usually without regard to party. The commission both makes the laws and executes them. The Mayor is chairman of the Commission but does not have the veto power.

OUR GREAT STATE PAPERS.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

IN CONGRESS JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous declaration of the thirteen United States of America When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitles them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us.

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of Trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-Citizens taken captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus Marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, THEREFORE, the REPRESENTATIVES of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, IN GENERAL CONGRESS, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly PUBLISH and DECLARE, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be FREE AND INDEPENDENT States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which INDEPENDENT STATES may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

SIGNERS OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Preamble.—We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this CONSTITUTION for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

Legislative Powers.—SECTION 1. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

House of Representatives.—SECTION II. 1. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

Qualifications of Representatives.—2. No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Apportionment of Representatives.—3. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose 3; Massachusetts, 8; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, 1; Connecticut, 5; New York, 6; New Jersey, 4; Pennsylvania, 8; Delaware, 1; Maryland, 6; Virginia, 10; North Carolina, 5; South Carolina, 5, and Georgia, 3.*

Vacancies, How Filled.—4. When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

Officers, How Appointed.—5. The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Senate.—SECTION III. 1. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.

Classification of Senators.—2. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

Qualifications of Senators.—3. No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

President of the Senate.—4. The Vice-President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided.

5. The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice-President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.

* See Article XIV, Amendments.

Senate a Court for Trial of Impeachments.—6. The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

Judgment in Case of Conviction.—7. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment, according to law.

Elections of Senators and Representatives.—SECTION IV. 1. The times places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to places of choosing Senators.

Meeting of Congress.—2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Organization of Congress.—SECTION V. 1. Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

Rule of Proceedings.—2. Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds expel a member.

Journals of each House.—3. Each House shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Adjournment of Congress.—4. Neither House, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Pay and Privileges of Members.—SECTION VI. 1. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either House they shall not be questioned in any other place.

Other Offices Prohibited.—2. No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either House during his continuance in office.

Revenue Bills.—SECTION VII. 1. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills.

How Bills Become Laws.—2. Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate shall, before it become a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of that House it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return; in which case it shall not be a law.

Approval and Veto Powers of the President.—3. Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the Senate and the House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

Powers Vested in Congress.—SECTION VIII. 1. The Congress shall have power:

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

2. To borrow money on the credit of the United States.

3. To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes.

4. To establish an uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.

5. To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures.

6. To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States.

7. To establish post-offices and post-roads.

8. To promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive rights to their respective writings and discoveries.

9. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court.

10. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations.

11. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water.

12. To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.

13. To provide and maintain a navy.

14. To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

15. To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

16. To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress.

17. To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dry-docks, and other needful buildings.

18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

Immigrants, how Admitted.—SECTION IX. 1. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person.

Habeas Corpus.—2. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

Attainder.—3. No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

Direct Taxes.—4. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

Regulations Regarding Customs Duties.—5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.

6. No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another, nor shall vessels bound to or from one State be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

Moneys, how Drawn.—7. No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

Titles of Nobility Prohibited.—8. No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state.

Powers of States Defined.—SECTION X. 1. No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

2. No State, shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any impost or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any State on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

3. No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

Executive Power, in Whom Vested.—SECTION I. 1. The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice-President, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

Electors.—2. Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector.

Proceedings of Electors.—Proceedings of the House of Representatives.—3. The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately choose by ballot one of them for President; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said House shall in like manner choose the President. But in choosing the President, the vote shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote. A quorum, for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the Vice-President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall choose from them by ballot the Vice-President.*

Time of Choosing Electors.—4. The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

Qualifications of the President.—5. No person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

Provision in Case of His Disability.—6. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected.

Salary of the President.—7. The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Oath of the President.—8. Before he enter on the execution of his office he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Duties of the President.—SECTION II. 1. The President shall be Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States except in cases of impeachment.

May Make Treaties, Appoint Ambassadors, Judges, etc.—2 He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

May fill Vacancies.—3. The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

May make Recommendations to and Convene Congress.—SECTION III. He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

How Officers May be Removed.—SECTION IV. The President, Vice-President, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

---

* This clause is superseded by Article XII, Amendments.

ARTICLE III.

Judicial Power, How Vested.—SECTION I. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

To What Cases it Extends.—SECTION II. 1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizens of another State; between citizens of different States; between citizens of the same State, claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens or subjects.

Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.—2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before-mentioned the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

Rules Respecting Trials.—3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

Treason Defined.—SECTION III. 1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

How Punished.—2. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Rights of States and Records.—SECTION I. Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

Privileges of Citizens.—SECTION II. 1. The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.

Executive Requisitions.—2. A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the Executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime.

Laws Regulating Service or Labor.—3. No person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

New States, How Formed and Admitted.—SECTION III. 1. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union, but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State, nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned, as well as of the Congress.

Power of Congress over Public Lands.—2. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Republican Government Guaranteed.—SECTION IV. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and, on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

Constitution, How Amended.—The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress; provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the Ninth Section of the First Article; and that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.

Validity of Debts Recognized.—1. All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the Confederation.

Supreme Law of the Land Defined.—2. This Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

Oath: of Whom Required and for What.—3. The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States, and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

Ratification of the Constitution.—The ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same.

DONE in Convention by the unanimous consent of the States present the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the twelfth. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names

Go: WASHINGTON,
Presidt. and Deputy from Virginia.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Articles in addition to, and Amendment of, the Constitution of the United States of America, proposed by Congress, and ratified by the Legislatures of the several states, pursuant to the Fifth Article of the original Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

Religion and Free Speech.—Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE II.

Right to Bear Arms.—A well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

ARTICLE III

Soldiers in Time of Peace.—No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV.

Right of Search.—The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE V.

Capital Crimes and Arrest Therefor.—No person shall be held to answer for a capital or other infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

ARTICLE VI.

Right to Speedy Trial.—In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

ARTICLE VII.

Trial by Jury.—In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.

ARTICLE VIII.

Excessive Bail.—Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX.

Enumeration of Rights.—The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X.

Reserved Rights of States.—The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE XI.

Judicial Power.—The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States, by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State.

ARTICLE XII.

Electors in Presidential Elections.—The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate; the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.

ARTICLE XIII.

Slavery Prohibited.—1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XIV.

Protection for all Citizens.—1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Apportionment of Representatives.—2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being of twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

Rebellion Against the United States.—3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid and comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

The Public Debt.—4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

ARTICLE XV.

Right of Suffrage.—1. The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

2. The Congress shall have power to enforce the provisions of this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XVI.

Income Taxes.—The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States and without regard to any census or enumeration.

ARTICLE XVII.

Election of Senators.—The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislatures.

When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies, provided that the Legislature of any State may empower the Executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the Legislature may direct.

ARTICLE XVIII.

Liquor Prohibition.—1. After one year from the ratification of this article, the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

ARTICLE XIX

Woman Suffrage.—1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any State, on account of sex.

Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce the provisions of this article.

RATIFICATION OF THE AMENDMENTS

Articles I to X were declared in force in 1791; Article XI in 1798; Article XII in 1804; Article XIII was proclaimed in December, 1865; Article XIV was proclaimed in July, 1868; Article XV was proclaimed in 1870; Article XVI and Article XVII were proclaimed in 1913; Article XVIII was proclaimed in January, 1919, and took effect in 1920; Article XIX was proclaimed in 1920.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS

Extracts from His Address Counselling the Maintenance of the Union.—Confinement of the General Government to its Constitutional Limitations, and Avoidance of Relations with Foreign Political Affairs.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES ON HIS APPROACHING RETIREMENT FROM THE PRESIDENCY.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop; but a solicitude for your welfare, which cannot end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger natural to that solicitude, urge me, on an occasion like the present, to offer to your solemn contemplation, and to recommend to your frequent review some sentiments, which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation, and which appear to me all-important to the permanency of your felicity as a people. These will be afforded to you with the more freedom, as you can only see in them the disinterested warnings of a parting friend, who can possibly have no personal motive to bias his counsel; nor can I forget, as an encouragement to it, your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.

Preservation of the Union.

The unity of government, which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you. It is justly so; for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence—the support of your tranquillity at home, your peace abroad, of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize. But as it is easy to foresee that, from different causes and from different quarters, much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth; as this is the point in your political fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed—it is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual and immovable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as of the palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can, in any event, be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts.

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest. Citizens by birth or choice of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of America, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism, more than any appellation derived from local discriminations. With slight shades of differences, you have the same religion, manners, habits, and political principles. You have, in a common cause, fought and triumphed together; the independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint counsels and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings, and successes.

Encroachments by the Government.

It is important. likewise, that the habits of thinking, in a free country, should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department, to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power, and proneness to abuse it which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal, against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments, ancient and modern; some of them in our own country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be, in any particular, wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change or usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance, in permanent evil, any partial or transient benefit, which the use can, at any time yield.

Observe good faith and justice toward all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all; religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt that, in the course of times and things, the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

Entanglements with Foreign Powers.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to constantly awake; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy to be useful, must be impartial; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation, and excessive dislike for another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil, and even second, the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favorite, are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations, is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Parting Counsels.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope that they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish; that they will control the usual current of the passions, or prevent our nation from running the course which hitherto has marked the destiny of nations; but if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit; some occasional good; that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigues, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism; this hope will be full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare by which they have been dictated.

United States, September 17, 1796. GEORGE WASHINGTON.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG SPEECH

Address at the Dedication of Gettysburg Cemetery, November 19, 1863.

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We are met to dedicate a portion of it as the final resting-place of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation shall under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

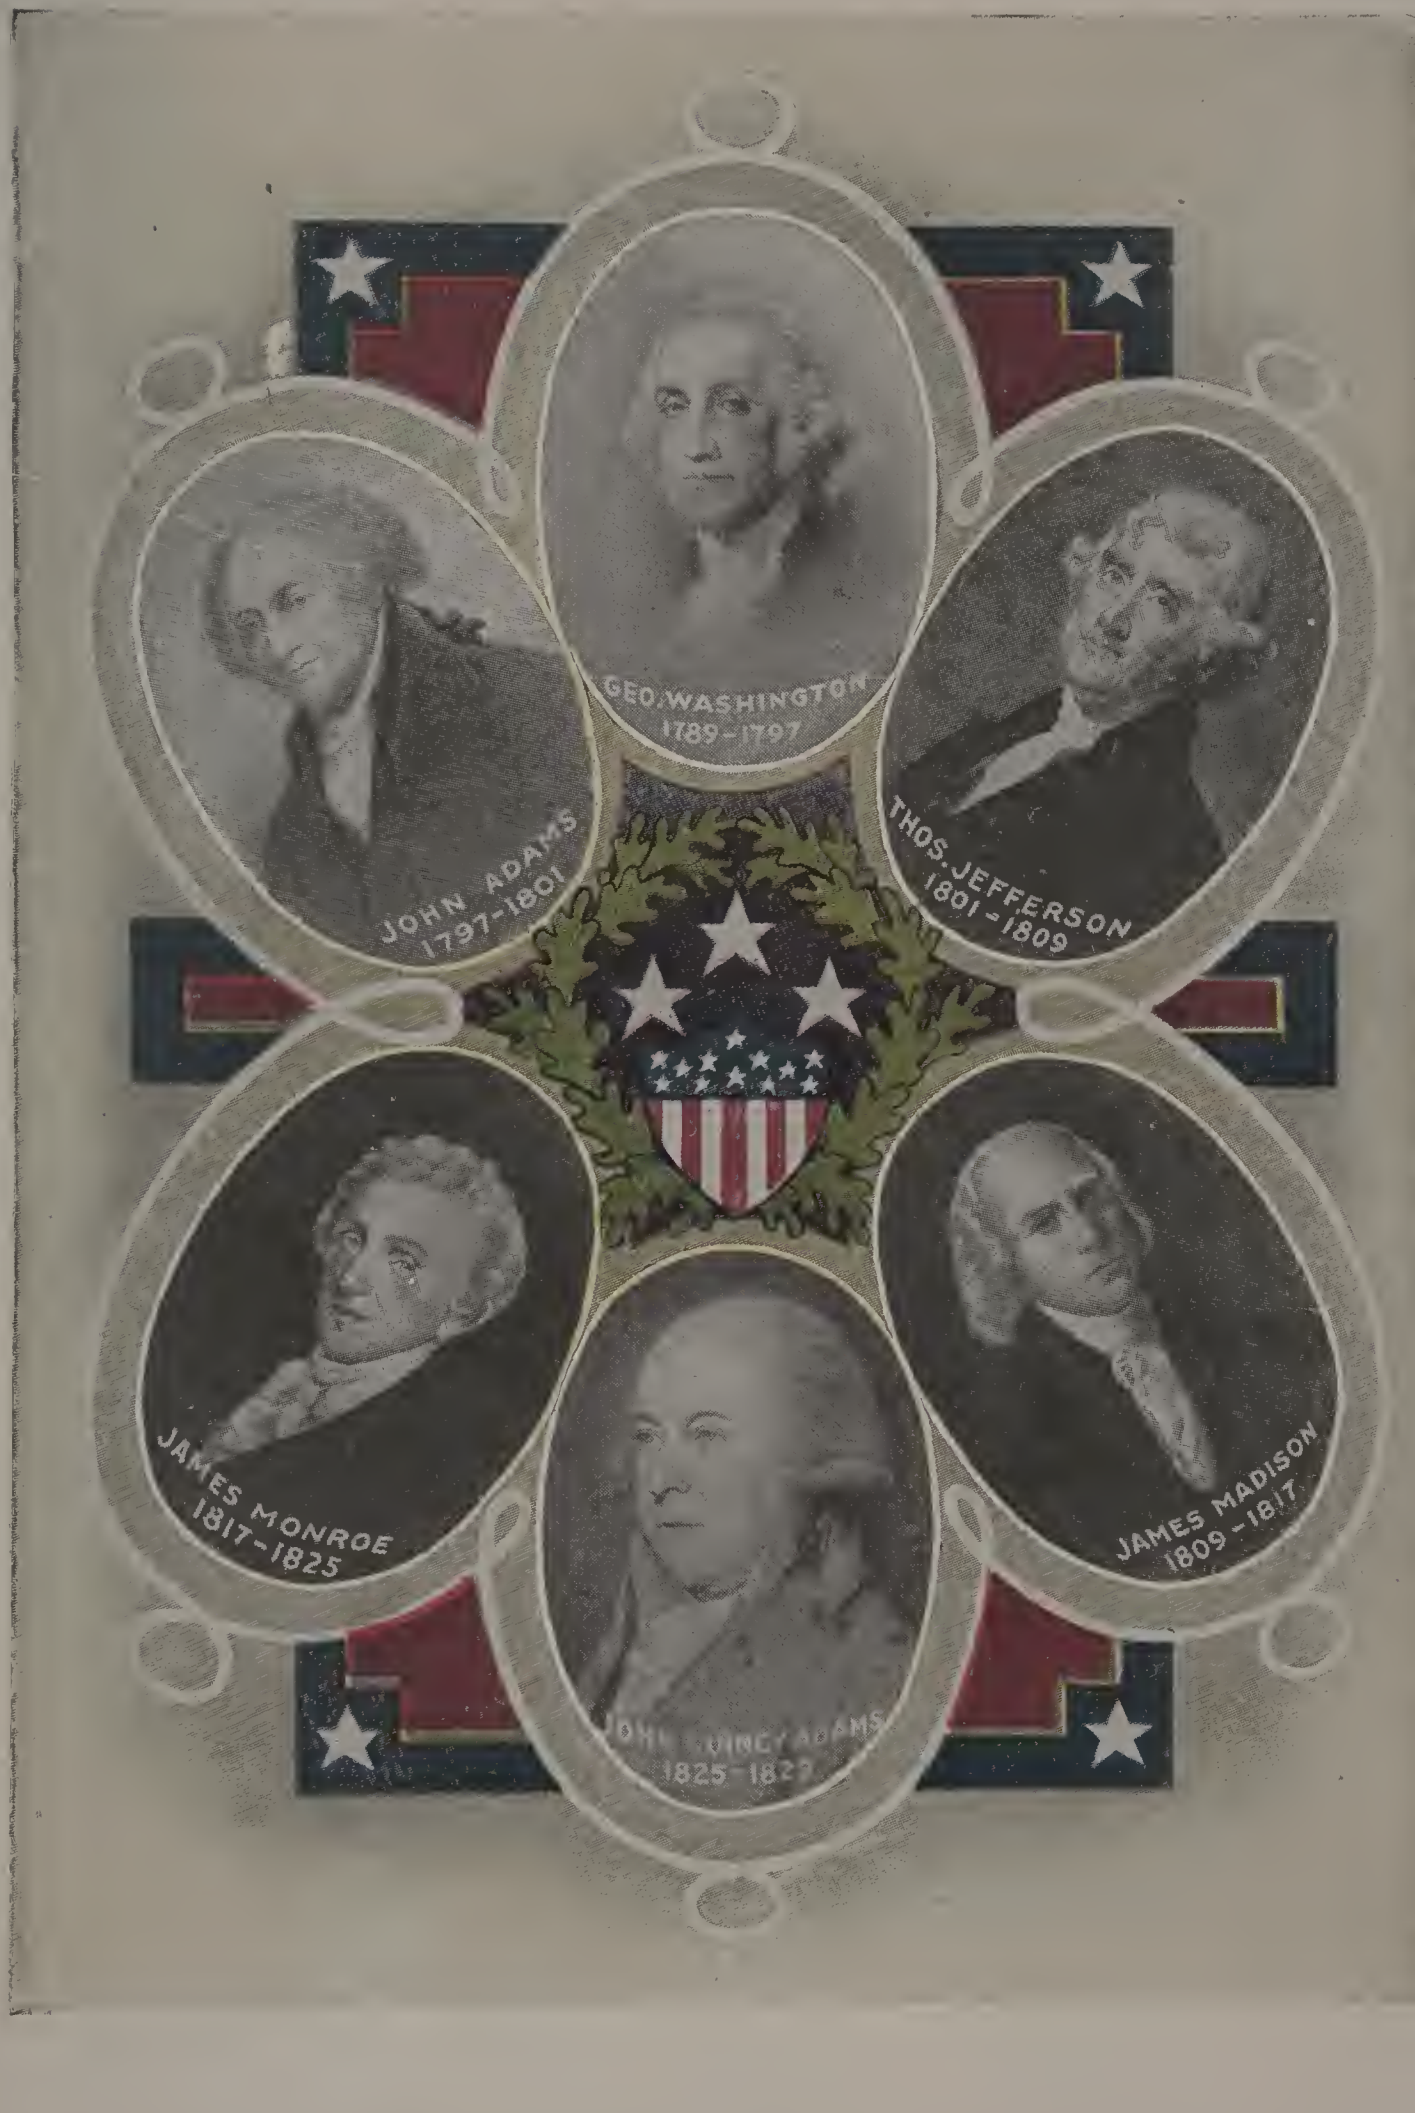
THE MONROE DOCTRINE

"The Monroe doctrine" was enunciated in the following words in President Monroe's message to Congress December 2, 1823:

"In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. . . . We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

POLITICAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

SHORT BIOGRAPHIES OF OUR PRESIDENTS.



George Washington, born February 22, 1732 (of English paternal ancestry. Father, Augustine Washington, a planter, m. Mary Ball), near Bridges Creek, Westmoreland County, Va. He did not go to college, but was a surveyor in early life, and in 1759 married Martha (Dandridge) Custis, who was born in 1732 and died in 1802. No children were born to them. He became a great soldier, and led the Continental forces to victory in the Revolutionary War. Washington was a planter, living at Mount Vernon, Va., when first elected President. He was inaugurated in 1789, and his terms of office aggregated 7 years 10 months and 4 days. In politics he was a Federalist and in religion an Episcopalian. Washington died at Mount Vernon December 14, 1799, of pneumonia, in his sixty-seventh year, and was buried at the same place.

John Adams, born October 30, 1735 (of English paternal ancestry. Father, John Adams, a farmer, m. Susanna Boylston), at Quincy, Norfolk County, Mass. He was graduated at Harvard in 1755 and was a school teacher for a short time after. In 1764 he married Abigail Smith, who was born in 1744 and died in 1818. They had five children, three sons and two daughters. Several years after leaving college he studied law. He filled many important positions in the Government service and was elected Vice-President of the United States in 1789. He was inaugurated as President of the United States in 1797, in his sixty-first year, and served one term (four years). In politics he was a Federalist and in religion a Congregationalist. He died at Quincy July 4, 1826, of general debility, in his ninetieth year, and was buried there.

Thomas Jefferson, born April 13, 1743 (of Welsh paternal ancestry. Father, Peter Jefferson, a planter, m. Jane Randolph), at Shadwell, Albemarle County, Va., He was a student at the College of William and Mary, graduating in 1762. In 1772 he married Martha (Wayles) Skelton, who was born in 1748 and died in 1782. Six children were born to them, one son and five daughters. Jefferson took up the study of law and became a great statesmen, being Vice-President of the United States from 1797 to 1801. He was inaugurated as President of the United States, in 1801. in his fifty-seventh year, and filled the office for two terms (eight years). In politics he was a Republican (although the Democratic party of to-day claims lineal descent from President Jefferson) and a Liberal in his religious views, Randall, his biographer, declaring that he was a believer in Christianity, although not a sectarian. He died at Monticello, Va., July 4, 1826, in his sixty-third year, and was buried at the same place.

James Madison, born March 16, 1751 (of English paternal ancestry. Father, James Madison, a planter, m. Nelly Conway), at Port Conway, King George County, Va. He was graduated at Princeton in 1771. In 1794 he married Dolly (Payne) Todd, who was born in 1772 and died in 1849. No children were born to them. Madison was a lawyer and a great statesman before his election to the Presidency. He was inaugurated in 1809, in his fifty-seventh year, and served two terms (eight years). In politics he was a Republican, and in religion an Episcopalian. He died at Montpelier, Va., of general debility, June 28, 1836, in his eighty-fifth year, and was buried at the same place.

James Monroe, born April 28, 1758 (of Scotch paternal ancestry. Father, Spence Monroe, a planter, m. Eliza Jones), at Head of Monroe's Creek, Westmoreland County, Va. He was a student at the College of William and Mary, graduating in 1776. In 1786 he married Eliza Kortwright, who was born in

He was inaugurated in 1817, in his fifty-eighth year, and served two terms (eight years). In politics he was a Republican and in religion an Episcopalian. He died at New York City, of general debility, July 4, 1831, in his seventy-third year, and was buried in Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond, Va.

John Quincy Adams, born July 11, 1767 (of English paternal ancestry. Father, John Adams, Lawyer and President of the United States 1797-1801, m. Abigail Smith), at Quincy, Norfolk County, Mass. He was graduated at Harvard in 1787, and in the same year married Louisa Catherine Johnson. who was born in 1775 and died in 1852. They had four children, three sons and one daughter. Adams had filled many public offices before his election to the Presidency and was a great statesman. He was inaugurated in 1825, in his fifty-seventh year, and served one term (four years). He claimed to be a Republican, but his doctrines were decidedly Federalistic, and political parties were disorganized at the time of his election. In religion he was a Congregationalist. He died at Washington, D. C., of paralysis, February 23, 1848, in his eightieth year, and was buried at Qunicy, Mass.

Andrew Jackson, born March 15, 1767 (of Scotch-Irish paternal ancestry. Father, Andrew Jackson, a farmer, m. Elizabeth Hutchinson), near Cureton's Pond, Union County, N. C. Jackson called himself a South Carolinian, but documentary evidence has been published to show that he was born in North Carolina. He did not go to college. In 1791 he married Rachel Donelson Robards, who was born in 1767, and died in 1828. No children were born to them. Jackson was a lawyer and statesman when elected President, and was inaugurated in 1829 at the age of sixty-one. He served two terms (eight years). He was shot at in the Capitol at Washington, January 29, 1835, by a house painter named Richard Lawrence, escaping because the pistol of the assassin missed fire. In politics he was a Democrat and in religion a Presbyterian. He died at Hermitage, Tenn., June 8, 1845, of consumption, in his seventy-eighth year, and was buried there.

Martin Van Buren, born December 5, 1782 (of Dutch paternal ancestry, Father, Abraham Van Buren, a farmer, m. Maria Hoes), at Kinderhook, Columbia County, N. Y. In 1807 he married Hannah Hoes, who was born in 1783 and died in 1819. Four sons were born to them. He was a great statesman before his election to the Presidency. He was inaugurated in 1837, at the age of fifty-four years, and served one term (four years). In politics he was a Democrat, and he belonged to the Reformed Dutch Church. He died at Lindenwold, N. Y., of asthmatic catarrh, July 24, 1862, in his seventy-ninth year, and was buried at Kinderhook, N. Y.

William Henry Harrison, born February 9, 1773 (of English paternal ancestry. Father, Benjamin Harrison, statesman, m. Elizabeth Bassett), at Berkeley, Charles City County, Va. He was graduated at Hampden-Sydney College in 1790, and in 1795 married Anna Symes, who was born in 1775 and died in 1864. They had ten children, six sons and four daughters. In his early life Harrison was a great soldier, and subsequently a statesman, but at the time of his election to the Presidency he was living quietly as a farmer at North Bend, O. In politics he was a Whig and in religion an Episcopalian. He was inaugurated in 1841, in his sixty-eighth year, but died at Washington one month after, April 4, 1841, having been ill but a few days of bilious pleurisy. He was buried at North Bend, O.

John Tyler, born March 29, 1790 (of English paternal ancestry. Father, John Tyler, jurist, m. Mary Armistead), at Greenway, Charles City County, Va. He was a graduate of the College of William and Mary in the year 1807. In 1813 he married Letitia Christian, who was born in 1790 and died in 1842, by whom he had seven children, three sons and four daughters. He was a great lawyer and statesman, and being Vice-President of the United States at the time of the death of President Harrison he stepped into the Presidential vacancy, at the age of fifty-one. He was inaugurated in 1841 and his term of office aggregated 3 years and 11 months. He was married a second time in 1844 to Julia Gardiner, who was born in 1820 and died in 1889, by whom he had five sons and two daughters. In politics he was a Democrat and in religion an Episcopalian. He died of a bilious attack at Richmond, Va., January 17, 1862, in his seventy-first year, and was buried at Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond, Va.

James Knox Polk, born November 2, 1795 (of Scotch-Irish paternal ancestry. Father, Samuel Polk, farmer, m. Jane Knox), near Pineville, Mecklenburg, County, N. C. NATURALIZATION LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The conditions under and the manner in which an alien may be admitted to become a citizen of the United States are prescribed by Section 2, 165–74 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by Chapter 3593 of the Acts of the First Session of the 59th Congress and Chapter 2534 of the Acts of the Second Session of the 59th Congress.

Declaration of Intentions.

The alien must declare upon oath before a circuit or district court of the United States or a district or supreme court of the Territories, or a court of record of any of the States having common law jurisdiction and a seal and clerk, of which he is a resident, two years at least prior to his admission that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince or State, and particularly to the one of which he may be at the time a citizen or subject.

Petition on Application for Admission.

At the time of his application for admission, which must not be less than two years nor more than seven years after such declaration of intention, he shall make and file a petition in writing, signed by himself (and duly verified by the affidavits of two credible witnesses who are citizens of the United States.

and who shall state that they have personally known him to be a resident of the United States at least five years continuously, and of the State or district at least one year previously), in one of the courts above specified, that it is his intention to become a citizen and reside permanently in the United States, that he is not a disbeliever in organized government or a believer in polygamy, and that he absolutely and forever renounces all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign country of which he may at any time of filing his petition be a citizen or subject

Conditions for Citizenship.

He shall, before his final admission to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces all foreign allegiance. If it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court that immediately preceding the date of his application he has resided continuously within the United States five years at least, and within the State or Territory where such court is held one year at least. and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same, he may be admitted to citizenship. If the applicant has borne any hereditary title or order of nobility he must make an express renunciation of the same. No person who believes in or is affiliated with any organization teaching opposition to organized government or who advocates or teaches the duty of unlawfully assaulting or killing any officer of any organized government because of his official character, shall be naturalized. No alien shall be naturalized who cannot speak the English language. An alien soldier of the United States Army of good character may be admitted to citizenship on one year's previous residence. Any alien in the United States navy or marine corps, who has served five consecutive years in the United States navy or one enlistment in the United States marine corps, and honorably discharged, shall be admitted to citizenship upon his petition, without any previous declaration of his intention to become a citizen. Any American woman that marries a foreigner shall take the nationality of her husband. At the termination of the marital relation she may resume her American citizenship, if abroad by registering as an American citizen within one year with a consul of the United States, or by returning to reside in the United States, or, if residing in the United States at the termination of the marital relation, by continuing to reside therein.

Minors.

An alien minor may take out his first papers on attaining the age of eighteen years, but he can only become a citizen after having his first papers at least two years, and having resided within the United States five years, and after having attained the age of twenty-one years.

The children of persons who have been duly naturalized being under age of twenty-one years at the time of the naturalization of their parents, shall, if dwelling in the United States be considered as citizens thereof,

The children of persons who now are or have been citizens of the United States are, though born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, considered as citizens thereof. Provided. That such naturalization or resumption takes place during the minority of such child: And provided further, That the citizenship of such minor child shall begin at the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States. All children born outside the limits of the United States who are citizens thereof and wh continue to reside outside the United States shall, in order to receive the protection of this Government, be required upon reaching the age of eighteen years to record at an American consulate their intention to become residents and remain citizens of the United States, and shall be further required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States upon attaining their majority.

Chinese.

The naturalization of Chinamen is expressly prohibited by Sec 14. Chap 126, Laws of 1882.

Protection Abroad to Naturalized Citizens.

Section 2000 of the Revised Statutes of the United States declares that "all naturalized citizens of the United States while in foreign countries are entitled to and shall receive from this Government the same protection of persons and property which is accorded to native-born citizens. But when a naturalized citizen shall have resided for two years in the foreign State from which he came, it shall be presumed that he has ceased to be an American citizen, and his place of general abode shall be deemed his place of residence during the said years." It is provided that such a presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence before a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States. No American citizen shall be allowed to expatriate himself while this country is at war. Any American citizen shall be deemed to have expatriated himself when he has been naturalized in any foreign State in conformity with its laws, or when he has taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign State.

THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE

The States have the right to say who shall vote, and who shall not, and for a time this right was unabridged, but the Federal government, by amendments to the Constitution, has circumscribed this right to the extent that the privilege of voting must not be denied on account of race or color (Fifteenth Amendment), or on account of sex (Nineteenth Amendment). In some States only citizens may vote; in others aliens who have declared their intention, under United States law, to become citizens are allowed to vote. All the states require their voters to be 21 years of age. In some States an educational test is required; in some, a poll tax; in some, certain property qualifications are required; in some, good moral character and ability to read the the Constitution are demanded.

INHABITANTS OF THE NEW INSULAR POSSESSIONS.

The inhabitants of Hawaii were declared to be citizens of the United States under the act of 1900 creating Hawaii a Territory. Under the United States Supreme Court decision in the insular cases, in May, 1901, the inhabitants of the Philippines are entitled to full protection under the constitution, but not to the privileges of United States citizenship. Residents of Porto Rico were admitted collectively to American citizenship by the act of Congress of 1917.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS FROM 1789 TO 1916.

Total Popular Vote and Electoral Vote for Candidates for President and Vice-President at each Election.

NOTE.—The people vote for electors, and those chosen in each State meet therein and vote for the candidates for President and Vice-President. The record of any popular votes for electors prior to 1824 is so scanty that an attempt to give them would be useless. In most of the States, for more than a quarter century following the establishment of the Government, the State Legislatures "appointed" the Presidential electors, and the people therefore voted only indirectly for them, their choice being expressed by their votes for members of the Legislature. In this tabulation only the aggregate electoral votes for candidates for President and Vice-President in the first nine quadrennial elections appear.

ELECTORAL VOTES.

1789. Previous to 1804, each elector voted for two candidates for President. The one who received the largest number of votes was declared President, and the one who received the next largest number of votes was declared Vice-President. The electoral votes for the first President of the United States were: George Washington, 69; John Adams, of Massacuhsetts, 34; John Jay, of New York, 9; R. H. Harrison, of Maryland, 6; John Rutledge, of South Carolina, 6; John Hancock, of Massachusetts, 4; George Clinton, of New York, 3; Samuel Huntingdon, of Connecticut, 2; John Milton, of Georgia, 2; James Armstrong, of Georgia; Benjamin Lincoln, of Massachusetts, and Edward Telfair, of Georgia, 1 vote each. Vacancies (votes not cast), 4. George Washington was chosen President and John Adams Vice-President.

1792. George Washington, Federalist, received 132 votes; John Adams, Federalist, 77; George Clinton, of New York, Republican, 50; Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, Republican, 4; Aaron Burr, of New York, Republican, 1 vote. Vacancies, 3. George Washington was chosen President and John Adams Vice-President.

1796. John Adams, Federalist, 71; Thomas Jefferson, Republican, 68; Thomas Pinckney, of South Carolina, Federalist 59; Aaron Burr, of New York, Republican, 30; Samuel Adams, of Massachusetts, Republican, 15; Oliver Ellsworth, of Connecticut, Independent, 11; George Clinton, of New York, Republican, 7; John Jay, of New York, Federalist, 5; James Iredell, of North Carolina, Federalist, 3; George Washington, of Virginia; John Henry, of Maryland, and S. Johnson, of North Carolina, all Federalists, 2 votes each; Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, of South Carolina, Federalist, 1 vote. John Adams was chosen President and Thomas Jefferson Vice-President.

1800. Thomas Jefferson, Republican, 73; Aaron Burr, Republican, 73; John Adams, Federalist, 65; Charles C. Pinckney, Federalist, 64; John Jay, Federalist, 1 vote. There being a tie vote for Jefferson and Burr, the choice devolved upon the House of Representatives. Jefferson received the votes of ten States, which, being the largest vote cast for a candidate, elected him President. Burr received the votes of four States, which, being the next largest vote, elected him Vice-President. There were 2 blank votes.

1804. The Constitution of the United States having been amended, the electors at this election voted for a President and a Vice-President, instead of for two candidates for President. The result was as follows: For President, Thomas Jefferson Republican, 162, Charles C. Pinckney, Federalist, 14. For Vice-President, George Clinton, Republican, 162; Rufus King, of New York, Federalist, 14. Jefferson was chosen President and Clinton Vice-President.

1808. For President, James Madison, of Virginia, Republican, 122; Charles C. Pinckney, of South Carolina, Federalist, 47; George Clinton, of New York, Republican, 6. For Vice-President, George Clinton, Republican, 113; Rufus King, of New York, Federalist, 47; John Langdon, of New Hampshire, 9; James Madison, 3; James Monroe, 3. Vacancy, 1. Madison was chosen President and Clinton Vice-President.

1812. For President, James Madison, Republican, 128; De Witt Clinton, of New York, Federalist, 89. For Vice-President, Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts, 131; Jared Ingersoll, of Pennsylvania Federalist, 86. Vacancy, 1. Madison was chosen President and Gerry Vice-President.

1816. For President, James Monroe, of Virginia, Republican, 183; Rufus King, of New York, Federalist, 34. For Vice-President, Daniel D. Tompkins, of New York, Republican, 183; John Eager Howard, of Maryland, Federalist, 22; James Ross, of Pennsylvania, 5; John Marshall, of Virginia, 4; Robert G. Harper, of Maryland, 3. Vacancies, 4. Monroe was chosen President and Tompkins Vice-President.

1820. For President, James Monroe, of Virginia, Republican, 231; John Q. Adams, of Massachusetts, Republican, 1. For Vice-President, Daniel D. Tompkins, Republican, 218; Richard Stockton, of New Jersey, 8; Daniel Rodney, of Delaware, 4; Robert G. Harper, of Maryland, and Richard Rush, of Pennsylvania, 1 vote each. Vacancies, 3. James Monroe was chosen President and Daniel D. Tompkins Vice-President.

THE PANAMA CANAL

To join two oceans in the bonds of wedlock seems like the fantasy of a dream. Yet more than one of the dreams of the past have become a reality within this twentieth century, and chief among these is the Panama Canal, the marriage of the Atlantic with the Pacific Ocean. In this stupendous work, a broad neck of land connecting two continents had to be severed, a tropical flood stream curbed and harnessed, a range of mountains pierced where it bent itself downward to the task, and the ocean waters lifted high into the air to form a new channel for the commerce of the nations.

Of all the works of man's hands this is the greatest. While the task was so enormous, the sum of human labor employed upon it was very small in comparison with the notable engineering works of the past, and the cost in human life a negligible quantity, the death-rate being no greater than it would have been with the same number of people employed at their usual avocations. In this vast achievement nature was set to combat nature, the forces of flowing water, of steam, of dynamite, of powerful machinery being utilized to complete in less than a decade with a small force of workers what would have needed a mighty multitude of men and many decades of time to perform in the methods of the far past.

Let us briefly summarize the details of this splendid victory over nature's obstacles. The greatest length of the Canal from deep water in the Caribbean Sea to deep water in the Pacific Ocean is about 50 miles, the length from shore to shore approximately 41½ miles. From Gatun dam on the Atlantic to the Pedro Miguel locks on the Pacific side its level is 85 feet above the sea, this being the height to which all vessels, great and small alike, have to be lifted to set them on the great water trail across the Isthmus.

Culebra Cut.—There were two great difficulties to be overcome in this mighty enterprise, one being the building of the most enormous dams ever undertaken by man, the other that of excavating a passageway through the mountain backbone of the isthmus, which fortunately at Culebra sinks downward at its highest point to a summit level of 495 feet above the canal bottom. This is at Gold Hill. At Contractor's Hill, opposite, the height is 364 feet.

Here it was that the great work of excavation took place, the Culebra Cut having a total length of nearly nine miles, and a width at its widest part of about half a mile. The great width at this point was caused by repeated slides of loosened earth into the excavation, a trouble which greatly added to the work to be done, the total quantity of material removed from the Canal on account of these slides being over 21,000,000 cubic yards. The total excavation for the entire Canal is estimated at 223,559,000 cubic yards, nearly double the amount of the original estimate. The cost of the entire work was approximately $375,000,000.

Gatun Dam.—The other great piece of work was the building of Gatun Dam, on the Atlantic side, about seven miles inland from the ocean waters. Here provision had to be made for a lift to the summit level of 85 feet, a flight of three locks being used for this purpose. This huge dam lies between hills, flanking it on each side and is enclosed by two massive rock walls, the space between these being filled with a mixture of sand and clay.

The crest of the dam is about one and a half miles long. At the bottom it has the great width of half a mile, at the water surface of 400 feet, this narrowing to 100 feet at the top level, which is 115 feet high, or 30 feet above the Canal level. The top and the upstream slopes are heavily riprapped. To control the volume of water in the Canal during flood-time in its feeding river a spillway was constructed, this being a concrete-lined channel 1,200 feet long and 285 feet wide, cut through a rock hill nearly in the center of the dam. It slopes upward from sea level at its toe to 69 feet at its crest, and is equipped with water-tight gates that can be raised or lowered in ten minutes' time.

Gatun Lake.—The water supply for the Canal is obtained from Chagres River, a mountain stream which rises about 10 miles northeast of Panama and has its outlet in the Caribbean Sea, its depth varying from 16 to 30 feet. Its valley forms part of the line of the Canal, and the result of lifting its level to the height required for the Canal has been to form a lake back of the dam 164 square miles in area. Through this passes the ship channel of the Canal, varying here from 40 to 85 feet in depth. The channel width for the first 16 miles from Gatun Dam is 1,000 feet. For the next four miles it is 800 feet and for the remaining distance to Culebra Cut 500 feet. This lake makes an admirable channel for navigation throughout the many miles of its length.

The minimum width of the Canal, that in Culebra Cut, is 300 feet, and its least depth 41 feet. The largest vessels now afloat have been thus provided for. The time needed for them to traverse the Canal is estimated at from 10½ to 11 hours. Ships of medium size can pass in an hour less time. The channel width through one-half the Culebra Cut has been increased from 200 to 300 feet at the bottom, thus enabling large ships to pass each other in any part of the Cut. In the locks a usable length of 1,000 feet and width of 110 feet has been provided, for the accommodation of the largest ships afloat at the date of the Canal opening.

Pacific Locks.—To lower vessels coming from the Atlantic to the Pacific sea-level a series of three locks has been constructed, mates to those in Gatun Dam, but divided into two operations. At Pedro Miguel, southwest of Culebra Cut, the summit level ends, a lock here lowering the passing vessel to a small lake with a surface height of 55 feet. This lake, one and a half miles long, is the result of a dam at Miraflores, at which point a flight of two locks has been constructed. These lower the vessel to tide-water, whence it may continue its voyage to the Pacific by way of a channel eight and a half miles long and 500 feet in bottom width. The depth of the Canal throughout is not less than 45 feet except in the approach channel on the Atlantic side, where at mean tide the bottom will lie at a depth of 41 feet.

The Canal Zone.—Preliminary to the work of construction a tract of land was procured from the Republic of Panama of the width of ten miles, an allowance of five miles on each side of the Canal. This constitutes what is known as the Canal Zone, and which, while remaining nominally a part of the Panama Republic, is completely under the control of the United States, which holds sovereign rights over the territory within the limits of the zone. This extends across the isthmus and to a distance of three marine miles into the ocean on either side. The two cities of Colon and Panama, with their harbors, which lie within this zone at its extremities, are not included in the grant of United States sovereignty, they remaining under the dominion of Panama.

The Health Problem.—One of the most important problems to be dealt with in the construction of the Panama Canal was that of sanitation. Situated in a region in which the dangerous diseases of yellow fever, malaria, and smallpox have always been present, the lives of the persons employed were likely to be in imminent peril.

It had been discovered during the American occupation of Cuba that a species of mosquito, the stegomya, carried the germs of yellow fever and transmitted them from person to person. Colonel Gorgas had been chief sanitary officer at Havana in 1898–1902 and had successfully combated yellow fever in that city. He was, therefore, the man for the place in Panama. It had also been discovered in 1898 that another species of mosquito, the anopheles, was the carrier of the germs of malaria. As for smallpox, it could be dealt with by vaccination and effective quarantine. Thus the sanitary officials on the Isthmus knew just how to combat the task that faced them.

The methods which had proved successful in Cuba were at once applied in Panama. The first requirement was to have all houses carefully screened so as to protect their inhabitants from the disease-bearing insects. The cities of Panama and Colon needed a thorough cleaning and the introduction of sanitary water and sewage systems. It was necessary to drain stagnant pools and get rid of standing water. Where this could not be done, spraying with crude oil became necessary. The jungle brushwood had to be cut and burned, and a general cleaning up was necessary along the whole occupied route of the Canal. Undergrowth was cleared away for a distance of two hundred yards around all habitations.

These methods proved strikingly effective. As a result of the active work done it may be said that the Canal Zone is to-day more healthful to white men than many parts of the United States. For many years yellow fever has been absent and there is no reason, under proper care, why it should ever again become epidemic in the Canal Zone. Yet it must be borne in mind that this condition is a result of unceasing vigilance and that about $20,000,000 was expended in the work. All things considered, the death roll has been comparatively small, the total number of deaths being about 6,000 during the whole period, of which 1,000 were due to accident. Less than 300 of them were Americans. During the same period of occupation by the French the deaths numbered about 16,000 or nearly three times as many.

Ship Traction.—No vessel is allowed to pass through the locks under its own power, electric locomotives being provided for hauling, these traversing tracks on the lock walls. The number of locomotives needed varies with the size of the vessel, four being usually employed, two on each wall. Two of these go ahead to pull the vessel and two astern to hold it in a central position and bring it to rest when it is fully within the chamber. The locomotives run on level tracks except when passing from one lock to another, when they climb heavy grades. There are two systems of tracks, one for towing and one for returning. The former have center racks or cogs throughout, but the return tracks have racks only on the grades.

Breakwaters.—At each entrance of the canal breakwaters have been constructed to protect ships from ocean storms. That in Limon Bay, or Colon harbor, extends about two miles northward, with a top width of fifteen feet and a height of ten feet above mean sea level. It is composed of quarried rock, containing about 2,840,000 cubic yards. Its purpose is to protect the canal entrance from the violent north winds likely to prevail from October to January.

The prevailing winds at this place, however, are the trade winds, which blow from the east and north and continue for more than nine months of the year. These, while the waves raised by them are not serious, make a rough harbor and stir up the soft bottom of Limon Bay, causing a large amount of silting in the ship channel. For this and other reasons it has been decided to construct an east breakwater also, the end of it being 2,000 feet from that of the west breakwater. This will put an end to all silting of the channel.

The breakwater on the Pacific side extends about 17,000 feet, or over three miles, from Balboa to Naos Island. It is from 50 to 3,000 feet wide at top and 20 to 40 feet above mean sea level, and contains about 18,000,000 cubic yards of earth and stone brought from the excavation at Culebra Cut. Its purpose is to divert cross currents that would carry soft material into the Panama end of the canal and also to furnish rail connection between the mainland and the islands in Panama Bay.

The First Boat.—The proudest day in the history of the enterprise was September 20, 1913, when the little tug-boat Gatun passed through the Gatun locks to the surface of Gatun Lake, and glided away over its broad expanse, it being the first boat to pass through any lock of the Panama Canal. It may further be stated that if the French canal had been completed it would now be out of date, its locks being too small to pass the boats at present likely to offer. The locks of the present canal are large enough to pass any vessel likely to demand passage for a long time to come. During the war with Austria and Germany, 1917–18, the great ships of the United States Navy were able to pass through the canal from ocean to ocean.

In conclusion it may be stated that the Canal Zone contains about 436 square miles, about 95 of which lie under the waters of the Canal and its associated lakes. In addition to its main surface are four islands in the Bay of Panama, known as Perico, Naos, Culebra and Flamenco. Naos being connected with the mainland by the breakwater.

Of the territory included, the United States owns about 363 square miles, the remainder being held by private owners. There will be permanent settlements, with piers and slips, at Cristobal at the Atlantic and Balboa at the Pacific entrance, the main drydock being at Balboa, one capable of holding any vessel that can pass through the locks. The main coaling plant will be at Cristobal, with a subsidiary one at Balboa.

THE COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

(The League of Nations covenant constitutes the first section of the treaties of peace with the Central Powers. It was first signed at Versailles by representatives of Germany and the Allied and Associated Powers, June 28, 1919. It was ratified by the German National Assembly, July 9, 1919; by the British House of Commons, July 21, 1919; by the French Chamber of Deputies, October 2, 1919; by royal decree of the King of Italy, October 7, 1919; by Japan, October 30, 1919. On January 10, 1920, ratifications of the Treaty of Peace and League of Nations were exchanged and peace became effective between Germany, France, Great Britain, Japan and the other Allied and Associated Powers, with the exception of the United States, which had not then ratified.)

THE COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

THE HIGH CONTRACTING PARTIES,

In order to promote international co-operation and to achieve international peace and security by the acceptance of obligations not to resort to war, by the prescription of open, just and honourable relations between nations, by the firm establishment of the understandings of international law as the actual rule of conduct among Governments, and by the maintenance of justice and a scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized peoples with one another,

Agree to this Covenant of the League of Nations.

ARTICLE 1.

Membership and Withdrawal.—The original Members of the League of Nations shall be those of the Signatories which are named in the Annex to this Covenant and also such of those other States named in the Annex as shall accede without reservation to this Covenant. Such accession shall be effected by a Declaration deposited with the Secretariat within two months of the coming into force of the Covenant. Notice thereof shall be sent to all other Members of the League.

Any fully self-governing State, Dominion or Colony not named in the Annex may become a Member of the League if its admission is agreed to by two-thirds of the Assembly, provided that it shall give effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations, and shall accept such regulations as may be prescribed by the League in regard to its military, naval and air forces and armaments.

Any Member of the League may, after two years' notice of its intention so to do, withdraw from the League, provided that all its international obligations and all its obligations under this Covenant shall have been fulfilled at the time of its withdrawal.

ARTICLE 2.

Composition of League.—The action of the League under this Covenant shall be effected through the instrumentality of an Assembly and of a Council, with a permanent Secretariat.

ARTICLE 3.

Assembly.—The Assembly shall consist of Representatives of the Members of the League.

The Assembly shall meet at stated intervals and from time to time as occasion may require at the Seat of the League or at such other place as may be decided upon.

The Assembly may deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world.

At meetings of the Assembly each Member of the League shall have one vote, and may have not more than three Representatives.

ARTICLE 4.

Council.—The Council shall consist of Representatives of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers, together with Representatives of four other Members of the League. These four Members of the League shall be selected by the Assembly from time to time in its discretion. Until the appointment of the Representatives of the four Members of the League first selected by the Assembly, Representatives of Belgium, Brazil, Spain and Greece shall be members of the Council.

With the approval of the majority of the Assembly, the Council may name additional Members of the League whose Representatives shall always be members of the Council; the Council with like approval may increase the number of Members of the League to be selected by the Assembly for representation on the Council.

The Council shall meet from time to time as occasion may require, and at least once a year, at the Seat of the League, or at such other place as may be decided upon.

The Council may deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world.

Any Member of the League not represented on the Council shall be invited to send a Representative to sit as a member at any meeting of the Council during the consideration of matters specially affecting the interests of that Member of the League.

At meetings of the Council, each Member of the League represented on the Council shall have one vote, and may have not more than one Representative.

ARTICLE 5.

Unanimous and Majority Vote.—Except where otherwise expressly provided in this Covenant or by the terms of the present Treaty, decisions at any meeting of the Assembly or of the Council shall require the agreement of all the Members of the League represented at the meeting.

All matters of procedure at meetings of the Assembly or of the Council, including the appointment of Committees to investigate particular matters, shall be regulated by the Assembly or by the Council and may be decided by a majority of the Members of the League represented at the meeting.

ARTICLE 6.

Secretariat.—The permanent Secretariat shall be established at the Seat of the League. The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary General and such secretaries and staff as may be required.

The first Secretary General shall be the person named in the Annex; thereafter the Secretary General shall be appointed by the Council with the approval of the majority of the Assembly.

The secretaries and staff of the Secretariat shall be appointed by the Secretary General with the approval of the Council.

The Secretary General shall act in that capacity at all meetings of the Assembly and of the Council.

The expenses of the Secretariat shall be borne by the Members of the League in accordance with the apportionment of the expenses of the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union.

ARTICLE 7.

Seat of the League.—The Seat of the League is established at Geneva.

The Council may at any time decide that the Seat of the League shall be established elsewhere.

All positions under or in connection with the League, including the Secretariat, shall be open equally to men and women.

Representatives of the Members of the League and officials of the League when engaged on the business of the League shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The buildings and other property occupied by the League or its officials or by Representatives attending its meetings shall be inviolable.

ARTICLE 8.

Reduction of Armaments.—The Members of the League recognize that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations.

The Council, taking account of the geographical situation and circumstances of each State, shall formulate plans for such reduction for the consideration and action of the several Governments.

Such plans shall be subject to reconsideration and revision at least every ten years.

After these plans shall have been adopted by the several Governments, the limits of armaments therein fixed shall not be exceeded without the concurrence of the Council.

The Members of the League agree that the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war is open to grave objections. The Council shall advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented, due regard being had to the necessities of those Members of the League which are not able to manufacture the munitions and implements of war necessary for their safety.

The Members of the League undertake to interchange full and frank information as to the scale of their armaments, their military, naval and air programmes and the condition of such of their industries as are adaptable to warlike purposes.

ARTICLE 9.

Advisory Commission.—A permanent Commission shall be constituted to advise the Council on the execution of the provisions of Articles 1 and 8 and on military, naval and air questions generally.

ARTICLE 10.

Preservation of National Integrity.—The Members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all Members of the League. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

ARTICLE 11.

Threat of War.—Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the Members of the League or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole League, and the League shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations. In case any such emergency should arise the Secretary General shall on the request of any Member of the League forthwith summon a meeting of the Council.

It is also declared to be the friendly right of each Member of the League to bring to the attention of the Assembly or of the Council any circumstance whatever affecting international relations which threatens to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.

ARTICLE 12.

Disputes.—The Members of the League agree that if there should arise between them any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, they will submit the matter either to arbitration or to inquiry by the Council, and they agree in no case to resort to war until three months after the award by the arbitrators or the report by the Council.

In any case under this Article the award of the arbitrators shall be made within a reasonable time, and the report of the Council shall be made within six months after the submission of this dispute.

ARTICLE 13.

Arbitration.—The Members of the League agree that whenever any dispute shall arise between them which they recognize to be suitable for submission to arbitration and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy, they will submit the whole subject-matter to arbitration.

Disputes as to the interpretation of a treaty, as to any question of international law, as to the existence of any fact which if established would constitute a breach of any international obligation, or as to the extent and nature of the reparation to be made for any such breach, are declared to be among those which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration.

For the consideration of any such dispute the court of arbitration to which the case is referred shall be the Court agreed on by the parties to the dispute or stipulated in any convention existing between them.

The Members of the League agree that they will carry out in full good faith any award that may be rendered, and that they will not resort to war against a Member of the League which complies therewith. In the event of any failure to carry out such an award, the Council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto.

ARTICLE 14.

Court of International Justice.—The Council shall formulate and submit to the Members of the League for adoption plans for the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice. The Court shall be competent to hear and determine any dispute of an international character which the parties thereto submit to it. The Court may also give an advisory opinion upon a dispute or question referred to it by the Council or by the Assembly.

ARTICLE 15.

Disputes Submitted to Council and Assembly.—If there should arise between Members of the League any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, which is not submitted to arbitration in accordance with Article 13, the Members of the League agree that they will submit the matter to the Council. Any party to the dispute may effect such submission by giving notice of the existence of the dispute to the Secretary General, who will make all necessary arrangements for a full investigation and consideration thereof.

For this purpose the parties to the dispute will communicate to the Secretary General, as promptly as possible, statements of their case with all the relevant facts and papers, and the Council may forthwith direct the publication thereof.

The Council shall endeavor to effect a settlement of the dispute, and if such efforts are successful, a statement shall be made public giving such facts and explanations regarding the dispute and the terms of settlement thereof as the Council may deem appropriate.

If the dispute is not thus settled, the Council either unanimously or by a majority vote shall make and publish a report containing a statement of the facts of the dispute and the recommendations which are deemed just and proper in regard thereto.

Any Member of the League represented on the Council may make public a statement of the facts of the dispute and of its conclusions regarding the same.

If a report by the Council is unanimously agreed to by the members thereof other than the Representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute, the Members of the League agree that they will not go to war with any party to the dispute which complies with the recommendations of the report.

If the Council fails to reach a report which is unanimously agreed to by the members thereof, other than the Representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute, the Members of the League reserve to themselves the right to take such action as they shall consider necessary for the maintenance of right and justice.

If the dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them, and is found by the Council, to arise out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the Council shall so report, and shall make no recommendations as to its settlement.

The Council may in any case under this Article refer the dispute to the Assembly. The dispute shall be so referred at the request of either party to the dispute, provided that such request be made within fourteen days after the submission of the dispute to the Council.

In any case referred to the Assembly, all the provisions of this Article and of Article 12 relating to the action and powers of the Council shall apply to the action and powers of the Assembly, provided that a report made by the Assembly, if concurred in by the Representatives of those Members of the League represented on the Council and of a majority of the other Members of the League, exclusive in each case of the Representatives of the parties to the dispute, shall have the same force as a report by the Council concurred in by all the members thereof other than the Representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute.

Article 16.

Resort to War.—Should any Member of the League resort to war in disregard of its covenants under Articles 12, 13 or 15, it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other Members of the League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking State, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking State and the nationals of any other State, whether a Member of the League or not.

It shall be the duty of the Council in such case to recommend to the several Governments concerned what effective military, naval or air force the Members of the League shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the League.

The Members of the League agree, further, that they will mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures which are taken under this Article, in order to minimize the loss and inconvenience resulting from the above measures, and that they will mutually support one another in resisting any special measures aimed at one of their number by the covenant-breaking State, and that they will take the necessary steps to afford passage through their territory to the forces of any of the Members of the League which are co-operating to protect the covenants of the League.

Any Member of the League which has violated any covenant of the League may be declared to be no longer a Member of the League by a vote of the Council concurred in by the Representatives of all the other Members of the League represented thereon.

Article 17.

Disputes with Nations Outside League.—In the event of a dispute between a Member of the League and a State which is not a Member of the League, or between States not Members of the League, the State or States not Members of the League shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, upon such conditions as the Council may deem just. If such invitation is accepted, the provisions of Articles 12 to 16 inclusive shall be applied with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the Council.

Upon such invitation being given the Council shall immediately institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the dispute and recommend such action as may seem best and most effectual in the circumstances.

If a State so invited shall refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, and shall resort to war against a Member of the League, the provisions of Article 16 shall be applicable as against the State taking such action.

If both parties to the dispute when so invited refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, the Council may take such measures and make such recommendations as will prevent hostilities and will result in the settlement of the dispute.

ARTICLE 18.

Treaties to be Published.—Every treaty or international engagement entered into hereafter by any Member of the League shall be forthwith registered with the Secretariat and shall as soon as possible be published by it. No such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.

ARTICLE 19.

Reconsideration of Treaties.—The Assembly may from time to time advise the reconsideration by Members of the League of treaties which have become inapplicable and the consideration of international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world.

ARTICLE 20.

Abrogation of Inconsistent Treaties.—The Members of the League severally agree that this Covenant is accepted as abrogating all obligations or understandings inter se which are inconsistent with the terms thereof, and solemnly undertake that they will not hereafter enter into any engagements inconsistent with the terms thereof.

In case any Member of the League shall, before becoming a Member of the League, have undertaken any obligations inconsistent with the terms of this Covenant, it shall be the duty of such Member to take immediate steps to procure its release from such obligations.

ARTICLE 21.

The Monroe Doctrine.—Nothing in this Covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe doctrine, for securing the maintenance of peace.

ARTICLE 22.

Mandates for Colonies.—To those colonies and territories which as a consequence of the late war have ceased to be under the sovereignty of the States which formerly governed them and which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, there should be applied the principle that the well-being and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in this Covenant.

The best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be entrusted to advanced nations who by reason of their resources, their experience or their geographical position can best undertake this responsibility, and who are willing to accept it, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as Mandatories on behalf of the League.

The character of the mandate must differ according to the stage of the development of the people, the geographical situation of the territory, its economic conditions and other similar circumstances.

Certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a Mandatory until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the Mandatory.

Other peoples, especially those of Central Africa, are at such a stage that the Mandatory must be responsible for the administration of the territory under conditions which will guarantee freedom of conscience and religion, subject only to the maintenance of public order and morals, the prohibition of abuses such as the slave trade, the arms traffic, and the prevention of the establishment of fortifications or military and naval bases and of military training of the natives for other than police purposes and the defence of territory, and will also secure equal opportunities for the trade and commerce of other Members of the League.

There are territories, such as South-West Africa and certain of the South Pacific Islands, which, owing to the sparseness of their population, or their small size, or their remoteness from the centers of civilization, or their geographical contiguity to the territory of the Mandatory, and other circumstances, can be best administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory, subject to the safeguards above mentioned in the interests of the indigenous population.

In every case of mandate, the Mandatory shall render to the Council an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

The degree of authority, control, or administration to be exercised by the Mandatory shall, if not previously agreed upon by the Members of the League, be explicitly defined in each case by the Council.

A permanent Commission shall be constituted to receive and examine the annual reports of the Mandatories and to advise the Council on all matters relating to the observance of the mandates.

Article 23.

Labor Conditions, Opium Traffic, Trade in Arms, etc.—Subject to and in accordance with the provisions of international conventions existing or hereafter to be agreed upon, the Members of the League:

(a) will endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women, and children, both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend, and for that purpose will establish and maintain the necessary international organizations;

(b) undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants of territories under their control;

(c) will entrust the League with the general supervision over the execution of agreements with regard to the traffic in women and children, and the traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs;

(d) will entrust the League with the general supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest;

(e) will make provision to secure and maintain freedom of communications and of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all Members of the League. In this connection, the special necessities of the regions devastated during the war of 1914–1918 shall be borne in mind;

(f) will endeavor to take steps in matters of international concern for the prevention and control of disease.

Article 24.

International Bureaus.—There shall be placed under the direction of the League all international bureaus already established by general treaties if the parties to such treaties consent. All such international bureaus and all commissions for the regulation of matters of international interest hereafter constituted shall be placed under the direction of the League.

In all matters of international interest which are regulated by general conventions but which are not placed under the control of international bureaus or commissions, the Secretariat of the League shall, subject to the consent of the Council and if desired by the parties, collect and distribute all relevant information and shall render any other assistance which may be necessary or desirable.

The Council may include as part of the expenses of the Secretariat the expenses of any bureau or commission which is placed under the direction of the League.

ARTICLE 25.

Red Cross.—The Members of the League agree to encourage and promote the establishment and co-operation of duly authorized voluntary national Red Cross organizations having as purposes the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world.

ARTICLE 26.

Amendments.—Amendments to this Covenant will take effect when ratified by the Members of the League whose Representatives compose the Council and by a majority of the Members of the League whose Representatives compose the Assembly.

No such amendment shall bind any Member of the League which signifies its dissent therefrom, but in that case it shall cease to be a Member of the League.
